'MAIL ROMEO' ADMITS KILLING WIDOW, 3 CHILDREN, POLICE SAY

Tears and Income.
Much in Five Words.
He Borrows $65,000,000.
Poor Old Britannia.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IF YOU HAVE TEARS to shed, and any considerable income earned in New York state, prepare to shed the tears and part of the income. Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, announces his plan for dealing with unemployment, and the plan is A FIFTY PER CENT INCREASE IN STATE INCOME TAX.

Please believe that tears shed when that news spreads will not be crocodile tears.

COL. LINDBERGH talked in Japan yesterday. Many heard him here, across the thousands of miles.

The American flier put an important fact in five words:

"There are no distant countries."

The world is so small you are inclined to ask, impatiently:

"How long must we wait to go to Mars and see something new?"

MARK, REAL ESTATE MEN, and you that want to borrow money on mortgage and can't, mark it also.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is improving New York City with a gigantic construction program that will show what money intelligently spent can do for a big town.

His is a big program amounting to about $250,000,000 in all.

Nobody keeps $250,000,000 "loose," so Mr. Rockefeller is borrowing $65,000,000, just to go on with, from Mr. Frederick H. Ecker, head of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

This is to be the largest real estate loan ever made on the surface of this round, whirling and depressed globe.

YOU READ, "American and French bankers GRANT a loan to Britain." That word "grant" must sound strange to British ears. When the war was on Britain was rushing billions to France and elsewhere on the Continent, sending other billions here to our industrialists and bankers.

Now, French and American bankers "grant" to Britain a loan less than one-tenth the amount that the British poured out to win the war.

They won it, but WAR DOES NOT PAY, and they know that now.

THE SHIPPING BOARD, under the President's direction, will presently decide the ownership of Leviathan, and other Shipping Board boats.

The bidders are both good American concerns, the West and East coasts competing. The Dollar Line interests and Herbert Fleishhacker, represent the Pacific Coast. In the East, an American company, with Kermit Roosevelt, son of President Roosevelt, and Vincent Astor would like the lines. In neither case would there be any foreign interest in the ownership.

In fact, the Roosevelt-Astor combination not only controls completely its American lines, but is reaching out for control of foreign lines, an excellent thing for this country. We used to have foreign owners getting our lines. Now we have our citizens getting outside lines.

KARL NAUMESTNIK, of Austria, walked across the English Channel on "water skis." That would have been very important when Napoleon was waiting for a favorable wind to take his soldiers from France to England.

He never made the crossing and might have tried to get an army over on "water skis."

Now, with planes in the air, submarines under the waves, the Austrian school teacher's invention is interesting, but unimportant, as though someone should invent a hansom cab.

CHICAGO'S NEWS is this! Three theaters recently replaced members of a local motion picture union with operators from the East.

Yesterday, the houses that committed this "crime against union labor" were bombed, and two children were injured. There is no proof that the Chicago union had anything to do with the bombing.

IF THEY DID have anything to do with it, and if there should be proof of it, that would be bad for the Chicago union, and for other unions. Pushing racketeer-gangster methods to the extent of bombing theaters filled with women and children is something that Mr. Capone probably would not approve.

IN NEW YORK, public schools, wisely, will probably postpone opening day because of infantile paralysis.

"When in doubt, refrain," is sound advice. But how children get infantile paralysis, nobody knows exactly. Fortunately, it is proved that a serum, made from the blood of patients that have recovered, and the patients, may be monkeys, will save children's lives.

DEALING WITH such a mysterious disease, you are reminded of Upton Sinclair's anecdote about the man down South, determined not to get yellow fever. He stood outside the store until everybody had left it, then entered to do his purchasing. While he was outside, a mosquito bit him, and gave him yellow fever.

MUSSOLINI NEAR DEATH IN PLANE

Italian Premier, Gen. Balbo Forced Down on River After Air Flight Review

International News Service.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy, had two narrow escapes from death or serious injury today when the plane in which he was returning to Rome from Spezia was forced down twice at the mouth of the River Ombrone, near Ostia, according to a Central News dispatch from Rome.

Mussolini was accompanied on the flight by Gen. Italo Balbo, Italian Air Minister.

The Premier and Gen. Balbo had been at Spezia for several days witnessing the Italian army's aerial maneuvers, in which virtually the entire Italian air force took part.

As they reached Ostia their plane encountered a terrific storm. The Premier's plane, according to the Central News, was badly buffeted, and twice the pilot was forced to descend.

FOUR VICTIMS STARVED, THEN SLAIN; OTHER MURDERS IN DOUBT

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent.

CLARKSBURG, W. VA., Aug. 29.—After 10 hours of merciless grilling, during which he had doggedly maintained his innocence, Harry F. Powers, alias Cornelius Pierson, 45-year-old love racketeer, confessed early today, police say, that he committed the hammer murder of Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher, wealthy Park Ridge, Ill., widow and her three children.

Rumors that human bones had been found in the ruins of a cottage burned recently near the garage at Quiet Dell under which the bodies of the four were found were discounted by police today, who said they were ham bones. The reports indicated the bones were those of a human being and gave rise to rumors that there may have been other victims of the Romeo.

Detectives were also scrutinizing additional clothing and jewelry seized in a garage in the rear of Power's home. Among these effects was a wrist watch inscribed with the initials "D. P. L.," and a wedding ring bearing the inscription, "From "C. O. P. to D. L."

Powers, physically worn out by the severe quizzing, but still unmoved and unworried over his predicament, with stoic calmness, told authorities, they say:

"I did it—for God's sake let me alone. I'll tell you all about it later after I have rested and talked with my attorney."

QUIZ RESUMED

With this statement, Powers sought his bunk in the county jail where he is imprisoned because of mob violence, and dropped calmly into a deep, snoring slumber.

His rest, however, was short.

Awakened early he was taken before Clarksburg and Chicago detectives for questioning in an effort to wrest from the lips of the matrimonial Romeo the details of the crime declared the most brutal in the annals of West Virginia.

He will not be permitted to seek the advice of his attorney, police said.

SLOWLY STARVED

This man of many loves, who said he wooed "just for fun," was to be asked to tell how the four came to their deaths.

Unless Powers makes a "clean breast" of the details, the manner in which Mrs. Eicher and her children Harry, 12; Greta, 14, and Anabel, 9, died will probably never be known, according to Coroner L. C. Goff.

Examination of the intestinal track of the four bodies, Goff said, revealed the possibility that the victims may have been slowly starved to death. Goff said they had had no food for at least 48 hours previous to their deaths. They had been dead four to six weeks.

BOY BADLY BEATEN

Only one of the bodies—that of Harry—has revealed evidence of brutality. His skull, Goff said, had been fractured as by a blunt instrument. One of the girls, he said, may have been strangled. There were no visible marks on the bodies of the others.

Goff planned to resume his examination today.

VIEWS BODIES

Confronted with the bodies of his alleged victims found buried below the floor of the concrete sub-basement of a garage he built several weeks ago at Quiet Dell, six miles from here, Powers at first told police that he had never seen them before.

Though there appears to be no doubt that the bodies taken from the slime-soaked earth around a drain are those of the Eicher family, they have been only tentatively identified.

Chance discovery of the garage, Powers' admission that he owned it, and the revelation of trunkloads of household effects and clothing of Mrs. Eicher and her children in a sub-basement below the blood-spattered floor tighten

JEWELRY SHOP GEMS STOLEN

An armed robber today backed George Newman into a back room of the latter's jewelry store, 907 Federal street, and escaped with $25 and jewelry valued at $900.

Newman told police the robber was a Negro, about 25, carrying a black bag.

Newman said the negro took two trays of rings, including several diamonds from a show case and the $25 from the cash register.

The man fled and when Newman reached the street, was not in sight.

Robbers broke open a safe in the office of the Arsenal Theater, 4109 Butler street, last night, and obtained about $225, the manager notified police today. The combination was knocked off. Entrance was gained through a rear door.

28th Vets Protest Darrah Promotion

Hoover Hears Fight On Colonel Ousted In Argonne

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP)—A protest against the presidential promotion of Col. Thomas W. Darrah, chief of staff of the Third Corps Area, to the rank of brigadier general was carried today to the White House and the high command of the Army by Representative Wyant, of Greensburg.

He based his complaint on the relief of Darrah from command of an infantry brigade of the 28th Division during the World War on a charge of unfitness.

Acting, he said, at the request of Pennsylvania National Guard officers who served under Darrah in France, Wyant placed his protest before Walter Newton, one of President Hoover's secretaries, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the Army. He said he would ask Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

GANDHI LEAVES WITH GOATS

BOMBAY, India, Aug. 29.—(AP)—The Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, clad only in a loin cloth and a shawl and accompanied by his two goats, sailed for England today to plead the cause of India's swarming millions before the bar of His Majesty's government.

Just before he left, a dozen members of the "Red Flag Union" who were demonstrating against him were seriously injured when they were attacked and their banners burned near the pier by Nationalist supporters.

As he stepped aboard the S. S. Raiputana for the trip to London, where he will attend the second round table conference to demand self-government for his native land, Gandhi said:

"I see nothing on the horizon to warrant hope.

"I was born an optimist and I am hoping against hope. My faith is in God and He seems to have made my way clear for me to go to London. Therefore I expect He will use me as His instrument for the service of humanity. For me the service of India is identical with the service of humanity."

CLARKSBURG MAN ADMITS KILLING 4, POLICE REPORT

BODIES FOUND BURIED UNDER GARAGE

Powers Flees Into Jail For Safety When Crowds Make Lynching Threats

the net of circumstantial evidence around Powers.

POLICE DIG TUNNEL

A [illegible] man hair by hair, as to permit most possible, spurred Clarksburg and Clarks authorities in their search for bodies. Armed with picks and [illegible] they dug into the earth [illegible] the garage. Then a tunnel was dug below the concrete floor of the garage to the basement.

There the body of Mrs. Eicher was found. A short [illegible] those of the children, their heads crushed by a hammer, brought to view. The bodies were decomposed.

MOBS SHOUT DEATH

News of the discovery spread fast through Clarksburg and angry mobs demanding the life of Powers surrounded the jail where officers took up the [illegible] 45-year-old Romeo with renewed vigor. But Powers, time after time, insisted:

"I don't know how they were killed—I didn't do it."

The pudgy love racketeer, whose ardent wooing spread almost the length and breadth of the United States and Canada, finally broke down and confessed, however, according to police.

ASKS FOR REST

To Lieut. Harry Herzog of the Park house police, for one-time vacuum cleaner salesman, said:

"I did it—for God's sake let me alone. I'll tell you all about it later after I have rested and talked with my attorney."

With a slight trace of a smile on his [illegible] face, Powers paused as he passed from the room in which he was [illegible] and remarked:

"I am going to tell all I know about this thing later on after I have talked with my attorney."

BALKS AT QUESTIONS

And then as an afterthought to the police officers who had been questioning him, he said:

"I hope you will let me rest for a while and not bother me with a lot of questions."

One of the officers spoke up:

"We will, Harry, if you will live up to your promise and tell us how those people came to their deaths."

Lieut. Herzog said Powers would sign a written confession later in the day.

FOUR 'DEATH CELLS'

The sub-basement of the garage where Mrs. Eicher and her family were believed to have been lured to their deaths was divided into four rooms, narrow, barred windows their only ventilation. Entry was through a narrow trapdoor in the floor of the garage which, since its construction, excited the curiosity of neighbors.

The rooms could readily have been converted into gas chambers, according to police reconstructing the crime. They advanced the opinion the slayer may have permitted them to die mercifully and then later to make sure of the job, crushed their heads with a hammer.

WIFE QUESTIONED

Powers' wife, Mrs. Luella Strothers Powers and her spinster sister, owners and operators of a grocery store, where Powers made his home here, were questioned again last night following the recovery of the bodies, but they did not shed any light on the prisoner's activities, police reported.

Interviewed a short time before they were questioned by police, Mrs. Powers and her sister nodded their heads mutely in answer to questions about the self-admitted matrimonial agency Romeo, refusing to advance any theories or discuss anything that pertained to the prisoner.

Mrs. Powers is said to have "met" her husband through a matrimonial agency just as did Mrs. Eicher and a score or more others whose ardent letters and photographs were found by detectives in the love-farm garage where the bodies of his alleged victims were uncovered.

CONFESSION UPHELD

Local authorities expressed themselves confident that Powers would make a clean breast of the killing later today. Lieut. Herzog said:

"There is no doubt Powers committed this gruesome crime. He told me himself this morning he did it, but begged to be let alone for a few hours until he had an opportunity to talk with his attorney."

C. D. Fortner, federal narcotic agent, present during the alleged confession, quoted the prisoner as having confessed.

The bodies of the victims still in their gunnysack wrappings were brought to a local mortuary. It was a sight, detectives figured, that would break down the stubborn prisoner. But not Powers.

UNMOVED BY BODIES

Powers remained unmoved either by the sight of the bodies of the widow and her three children or the threatening attitude of the restless crowds which surged from the city lockup to the county jail from the moment word of the discovery of the bodies flashed through this mountain community until early morning.

The pudgy little love racketeer, maintaining a suave, outward calm, answered questions in a low, flat voice, his owlish eyes blinking behind horn spectacles as city, county and state authorities shot questions after question at him.

Hustled into the county jail from the city lockup as a menacing crowd gathered around the city building, Powers showed the first signs of worry as he ran for the protecting portals of the county jail only a few feet ahead of an onrushing mob with clenched fists upraised.

MOB ELUDED

Cries of "get him" and "hang him" rose out of the crowd as Chief of Police Clarence A. Duckworth and City Detective Carl Southern slipped their prisoner into the jail and banged the doors shut. Powers was perspiring freely from the exertion of his race against mob violence.

He heaved a great sigh of relief as the jail portals were shut and eagerly held out his hands for the removal of the handcuffs which bound his wrists and just as eagerly followed his jailer to a cell.

Baffled in their quest, the crowd gradually thinned to only a few score people scattered about in front of the courthouse by dinner time and Chief Duckworth found another opportunity to move his prisoner. This time the Clarksburg authorities led the matrimonial agency Romeo into the morgue.

TAKEN TO MORGUE

Out the back way into a waiting automobile guarded heavily by city police squads Powers was hustled and within a few moments he was being led into the rear of the Romine undertaking establishment where Coroner I. C. Goff was preparing the bodies for autopsy.

The room was hushed as Powers was led to the slab where lay the remains of Mrs. Eicher. Nearby, stretched to view, were the bodies of her children. Chief Duckworth turned Powers, halting in front of the widow.

"Who did this, Powers?"

The prisoner bobbed his head and blinked his eyes. He looked towards the bodies and replied in a flat, even voice:

"I don't know."

DENIES KNOWING VICTIMS

The questioner persisted:

"Who are these people?"

Powers still blinking like an owl, but displaying no emotion whatever, replied:

"I don't know. I never saw them before."

Crowds learning of the prisoner's presence in the morgues began gathering in Main street. Murmuring sounds filtered into the death chamber.

Chief Duckworth looked askance at his prisoner and asked again:

"Aren't you going to tell us about it, Powers?"

Still unmoved and seemingly unworried, he replied:

"I don't see how I can. I don't know anything about it."

GHOST STORIES TOLD

Ghost stories abound in the neighborhood of the Powers love farm garage. They are not just murder bugaboos, rather. They have been going the rounds of Quiet Dell in the vicinity of the Powers place for many years.

Before Powers built the elaborate, concrete-founded chicken garage there stood on the site an old, ramshackle cottage. It was occupied by Floyd Golden and his family. The Goldens lived an unusually mysterious and secretive existence, residents of the community say.

Frank Wine, a farmer of the district disclosed today that there had always been something unusual about the place, something that was hard to explain, he said.

Our children were afraid of the place and it was a place continually shunned after dark. Of course, I am not going to tell you that anybody actually saw ghosts, but none of us around here ever liked the place.

FIRE DESTROYED PLACE

After Powers bought the place the Golden family moved out. They vacated the premises on a Monday and the grizzled old shack was destroyed by fire before the end of the week. Only a brick structure which was once the chimney remained and it was through these grim ruins that Powers sinister form, half bent in the waning light of the midnight moon, was seen by fearful neighbors and passersby time and time again, according to their stories today.

Powers built the garage himself obtaining occasional laboring help in digging the foundation and drainage trench where the bodies of the widow and her children were found yesterday.

It was through the help of a father and son in digging the drainage ditch last spring that Clarksburg police first heard of the mysterious farm garage.

VETS OPPOSING RISE IN RANK FOR COLONEL

lee to conduct a hearing on Darrah's fitness.

HEARING TO BE HELD

Darrah, stationed at headquarters of the 3rd Corps at Baltimore, was appointed a brigadier general by President Hoover in July on the recommendation of the Army Promotion Board. He assumes his new rank next Tuesday, the appointment being subject to confirmation of the Senate in the next Congress.

Gen. MacArthur, after hearing the Pennsylvania Representative's protest, asked that the complainants against the promotion appear before him in an informal hearing to sift the charges against Darrah. MacArthur said Wyant agreed to do that.

Gen. MacArthur confirmed the relief of Darrah in October, 1918, from command of the 55th Infantry Brigade, composed of Western Pennsylvania National Guardsmen, by Maj. Gen. Charles H. Muir, then commanding the 28th Division.

RELIEVED IN ARGONNE

Representative Wyant said the dismissal of Darrah occurred during the height of the Meuse-Argonne offensive, at a time the 55th Brigade suffered heavy casualties, when, according to Gen. Pershing's final report on the American Expeditionary Force's activities in the war, the enemy made frequent counter-attacks with fresh troops, particularly on the front of the 28th and 35th Divisions."

The chief of staff said that incident had been considered in the recommendation for his present promotion and found outweighed by his accomplishments in the service and "circumstances" of the action. He said:

"Col. Tommy Darrah is in my opinion one of the three best infantry colonels in the Army today. That unfortunate event in his career happened in the stress and confusion of battle in the war and looked upon from the viewpoint of today, was not warranted by the facts. Darrah later served under me and he performed distinguished service."

ENRAGED MAN KILLS WIFE

The condition of Mrs. Irene Frattini, 23, of 4686 Lorigan street, Bloomfield, whose throat, police said, was slashed last night by her enraged stepfather, Amedio Tucci, 48, after he had shot and killed her mother, Mrs. Mary Tucci, was regarded as fair at West Penn Hospital today.

The tragedy occurred in Mrs. Frattini's home in view of her husband, Felix, 31, and their three children, Bertha, 6; Gloria, 5, and Dorothy, 16 months. Mrs. Tucci, said to have been separated from her husband for two months, returned to her daughter's home yesterday from a sanitarium. Tucci, living at 4610 Lorigan street, called at the home and attempted to effect a reconciliation and resigned his stepparental [illegible] of being responsible for their entertainment, according to police.

A bitter quarrel arose. Tucci, police said, drew a revolver and shot his wife five times. The revolver empty, Tucci, police declared, then whipped out a razor and slashed Mrs. Frattini's throat.

REGISTRATIONS FORECAST VOTE RECORD

Thousands More Here Await Decision on Assessment Fight Expected Monday

The heaviest vote ever cast in the county is forecast for the primary election in the figures of the three third-class cities where voters registered yesterday. It was the first registration day in the third-class cities, McKeesport, Clairton and Duquesne.

In McKeesport, 5,000 persons registered. In 1930, when all previous registrations were exceeded, but 8,042 persons registered in the three registration days.

In Duquesne 2,010 persons registered yesterday. In the three registration days last year only 2,597 persons registered.

In Clairton 1,371 persons registered. Last year 2,049 registered in the three days. Heretofore the first day has always been the lightest registration day. The rush for registration has always occurred on the last day. September 1 and 12 are the two remaining registration days.

RULING AWAITED

If Judge James H. Gray decides Monday that it is legal and proper for the Board of Assessment and Revision of Taxes to continue assessing on the additional assessment books, there is going to be a rush of thousands of persons to the board's office Monday and Tuesday.

If he rules the other way, then those same thousands will be unfortunate because the assessors missed them in the annual assessment last year or because they waited until the last minute to be assessed.

SITUATION UNCERTAIN

These two deductions are about the only clear conclusions that could be drawn from the scrambled situation that the assessment has resolved itself into following the issuance of a mandamus by the State Attorney General's office against the Board of Assessment and Revision of Taxes requiring it to certify the additional names placed on the books during the last several weeks. Judge Gray set Monday at 10:30 o'clock for the hearing on the mandamus.

George J. Schad, chairman of the board, said yesterday that all assessing ceased with his order to stop assessing until the court holds its hearing on the mandamus. A subordinate assessor was still working yesterday in the office of Alderman J. P. Kearcher in the Seventeenth Ward. Of his activities Schad said:

"You would think a man after reading of my order to stop assessing would have sense enough to stop. But this man apparently has not. However I have ordered him to stop. The names will not be put on the books."

DEFENDS ACTION

In justification of his position in shutting down the assessment until after the mandamus hearing, Schad said:

"On advice of the County Solicitor we will not assess anybody until the court rules on the matter of certification."

The last day to be assessed is Wednesday. Thursday is the first registration day in Pittsburgh. In spite of the closing down of assessments on the additional books there are enough persons assessed now to make this the largest registration in Pittsburgh's history.

CHRISTY SPURNS TAXES

Delinquent Tax Collector Walter J. Christy announced late yesterday that pending the court decision expected Monday, he would refuse on the advice of his counsel to receive taxes assessed on the extra books.

He said Attorney George A. Alter had advised him to refuse to recognize assessments unless it was certified they were made under Act No. 87, approved May 13, 1931. That formality had not been adhered to in the assessments made so far.

Dormont Ball Club Denies Firemen Drenched Fans

Whether Dormont baseball fans were drenched with water following a squabble which ended the Books-Dormont City League championship game in the first inning last night, is a moot question. Some say yes. Some say no.

With Books leading 2 to 1, there was a close play at the plate. Umpire Jimmy Shearn called Honey While, of Dormont, safe, when he crashed into Catcher Rip Collins, of the Books.

Collins, it is said, went after While and was ordered from the game. Books protested and insisted While be benched. Spectators crowded on the field and the umpire awarded the game to Dormont.

The crowd refused to leave and police and firemen were called. Fans insisted on the return of their money and when they refused to leave, it is said, the firemen drenched them with water. William Maisch, president, and George Falconer, manager of the Dormont Club, denied the fans were drenched. The club announced that admissions would be refunded upon presentation of the ticket stubs.

'POWDERPUFF' FLIERS SET FOR FINAL BATTLES OF RACE

MISHAP MARKS MRS. THADEN'S ST. LOUIS HOP

Gladys O'Donnell in Lead Again; Girls Weary but In High Spirits for Finish

By LOUISE THADEN

Winner of the 1929 National Air Derby for Women, and Pittsburgh's Representative in the 1930 Cross Country Derby

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Aug. 29.—Parks Airport here was a busy place this morning as the 50 planes in the Santa Monica to Cleveland air derby prepared to hop off for Dayton, the last night stop before Cleveland. Everybody is in high spirits, despite their weariness, and determined to put forward their best efforts in the last leg of the trip.

Gladys O'Donnell led the flight again, coming here from St. Joseph, Mo., a distance of 109 miles in 37 minutes. Phoebe Omlie, who came in second, was leading the race on points.

Everybody had trouble yesterday. All who didn't run out of gasoline came close to it. Three ships just made Jefferson City, and five of us had to get gas on the way.

I had two thrills when I was taking off from a hay field. When squeezed in between three mountains the motor stopped dead when I was about 50 feet up, and not over the mountains. I reached for the switch for the other tank so fast I strained a muscle in my arm. Fortunately, she came on again and I went scooting on up a ravine.

The second thrill was when we were getting ready to take off from Jefferson City. The throttle arm came off and left the anchor wide open. With a car directly in front of me and my brakes none too good. I strained the other arm getting to the switch. Altogether, I have lost about three pounds.

Blanche Noyes came back at Jefferson City and will be with us from now on.

I am not tired in the least and could go on flying derbies forever. The only thing I feel bad about is that I am not putting up a very good showing for Pittsburgh. There is yet hope, until the finish line at Cleveland is crossed.

(Mrs. Thaden is writing exclusively for the Sun-Telegraph of her air experiences in this year's races.)

REUNION DRAWS VET THRONGS TO PARK

12th Annual Sun-Telegraph Picnic Features Promise Full Day of Amusement

Thousands of ex-service men were gathering today in Kennywood Park for the twelfth annual reunion of veterans of all American wars, sponsored by the Sun-Telegraph.

Family groups planned picnic dinners. Entertainment throughout the day and closing with a free motion picture show, beginning at 8:45 o'clock, had been arranged. Free amusement tickets were provided for all veterans registering before 6 o'clock.

A canteen where a dozen Salvation Army lassies dispensed free doughnuts and coffee to the veterans was a center of attraction. Nine hundred dozen doughnuts were provided by the paper for its guests. A free vaudeville bill of eight acts was scheduled for 4 o'clock. A treasure hunt through the park was another popular treat.

The feature of the day will be a 6 o'clock dinner with Civil War veterans and ex-service men now in local hospitals as guests of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Committeemen under General Chairman John Bingham and Vice Chairman Harry S. Hall, were greeting Civil War veterans as they entered the park. The disabled veterans from hospitals were being transported to the outing in cars of Red Cross social workers.

BRITISH POUND SAVED BY U. S., FRENCH LOAN

New Cabinet Takes Up Tax Problem After Securing Credit of $400,000,000

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS

International News Service.

LONDON, Aug. 29. — Assured of the safety of the pound sterling by the action of American and French bankers in granting a credit of $400,000,000 for a year, the new cabinet of co-operation turned to the problem of additional taxation today.

The cabinet has already agreed on reductions in expenss amounting to about $250,000,000, or half the estimated deficit in the budget, and now must face the difficult problem of raising the remainder by taxation on the principle of "equal sacrifice for all classes."

As the British public has, since the war, been the most heavily taxed in the world, the cabinet will have to exercise great ingenuity in finding new sources of revenue.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(INS.)—A group of 110 banks, headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., joined today in extending $200,000,000 one-year crtdit to the new British national government. A similar amount was advanced by Paris bankers.

None of the American credit will be publicly offered.

He planned to make his first stop on the American Continent at Povungnituk, an Eskimo village in Northern Quebec. He left Westerland, Germany, on August 8, with the determination to fly over the ice wastes of Greenland and thus be the first to follow such a course from Europe to the United States. SLAYINGS BARED BY CURIOSITY OF NEIGHBORS

Suave Strangers' Visit to Widow's Home Brought Revelation of Tragedy

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—The curiosity of neighbors, aroused by the visit of a suave stranger to the home of Mrs. Asta Eicher in suburban Park Ridge, and the subsequent disappearance of the widow and her children, caused police to raise the curtain on a gruesome mystery which reached a denouement today in Clarksburg, W. Va., with the finding of the bodies of Mrs. Eicher and her children, Greta, 14, Harry, 12, and Anabel, 9.

Four years ago Mrs. Eicher's husband, a silversmith of long standing in the village of 10,500 population, died and left her a comfortable home, three children, and an income. Of an artistic inclination, Mrs. Eicher, her friends said, sought to appease her grief and loneliness in music and painting. She frequently spoke of admirers, friends said, but none appeared publicly until June 22.

On that day, came a stranger—known as Cornelius O. Pierson, polished, gentle mannered and attractive—whom the widow described as "an old friend of the family."

LEFT ON VISIT

On June 27, the man departed. On June 28, Mrs. Eicher left, ostensibly "to visit relatives in Denver." The three children were left in the care of a nurse and a roomer, Jack Williams.

Two weeks ago, the man returned and started to store the house furnishings in a garage. Questioned by neighbors, he said the house had been sold and that Mrs. Eicher would not return. Chief of Police Harold W. Johnson investigated. Pierson showed him papers, the officer said, to prove that the house was sold. Nevertheless, Chief Johnson asked Pierson to call at the police station the next day.

The man did not show up, but Mrs. Eicher's neighbors told Chief Johnson that the three children had been dressed in their best clothes and driven that morning by the stranger in an automobile bearing West Virginia license plates—later found to have been stolen—and loaded with the youngsters' luggage.

Several days later, police broke into the Eicher home. What they found caused Chief Johnson to swear out warrants charging Pierson with three kidnapings and one case of manslaughter.

YOUTH TURNING TO RELIGION

SEWANEE, Tenn., Aug. 29.—(AP).—Modern youth is revolting against the "sterility of self expression" which has been forced upon it by its elders, Prof. Paul Rusch, of St. Paul's University, Tokio, Japan, said here in an address before the international convention of the Episcopal Brotherhood of St. Andrews. He said:

"The world's young people are dissatisfied and restless, conscious of standing on a new frontier, but they have no idea of what is ahead of them because of the sorry mess adults have made of the affairs of youth during the last decade or two.

"Tired of the sterility of self expression, youth has gone in search of new loyalties and has found them very largely in spheres of life with religious content. This is the most hopeful sign of the present situation with youth, for it unquestionably is turning to religion after its disillusionments in other spheres."

He was the founder of St. Vincent and father of the Benedictine Order in America.

If nothing else serves to bring folks home from the four corners of the earth, then September weddings will. The Herbert A. Gidneys, of Devonshire street, are back from their summer home in Hyannisport, with their daughter, Elizabeth, who'll become the bride of Dr. H. Kingsley Elder, Philadelphia, son of Mrs. Carrie E. Elder, of Brownsville, Pa., on September 10.

And the Charles Arensbergs, with their four sons, Conrad, Walter, Charles and James Arensberg, will return the end of September to their Amberson avenue home. They have been spending the summer at their country place, Compton, on the eastern shore.

And now I'll tell you of a newly announced wedding-date that will cause many more to hurry home for the ceremony. The Andrew Craig Houstons, of North Highland avenue, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Mary McCrea Houston, to Thomas Joshua Griffin, of Los Angeles, Cal., son of the Samuel Green Griffins, of Hillsboro, O. The marriage will be solemnized on September 9, in the Highland Presbyterian Church, at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Officiating will be the Rev. Dr. George C. Fisher, pastor.

For Sept. 9 Date Set

Mary has named her bridal party, too. Her matron of honor will be her sister-in-law, Mrs. Samuel Craig Houston, of Worcester, Mass., whose small daughter, Jane McCrea Houston, will be flower girl. And the bridesmaids will include Margaret Hannah, Annabelle Eberhardt, Marie Chalfant and Mrs. Malcolm Zander, of Pittsburgh; Rachel McCormick, of Coraopolis Heights, and Agnes Squier, of New York.

Mr. Griffin has chosen Stanley Freihoffer, of Philadelphia, to serve as his best man, and the ushers will be Malcolm Zander, Leslie Allen and Howard Smallwood, of Pittsburgh; Samuel C. Houston, of Worcester, brother of the bride-elect; Lawrence Townsend Griffin, of Cincinnati, brother of the bridegroom-elect, and George McConnaghey, of Cleveland, O.

And there is to be a reception later at the University Club.

Mrs. Frederic C. Schiller, Jr., of Sewickley, is at the Weylin Hotel, in Gotham, did you know? And the Daniel E. Nevins, of Thorn street, Sewickley, returned this week from Canada, where they have been guests of Mrs. Nevin's father, Richard E. Chislett, at his summer home on Parry Sound, Georgian Bay.

Mrs. Alfred Branch Harlow entertained at an informal luncheon and bridge Tuesday in her Beaver road residence, honoring Mrs. John Lyon, of the Ruskin, who, with Mr. Lyon, is at the Elmhurst Inn for several months.

The Pittsburgh Field Club men's golf committee announces a father and son tournament scheduled for Thursday, featuring two-ball foursomes, selective drives and alternate strokes, and 18 holes medal play under one-half of combined handicap. There will be prizes for low gross and low net scores. The committee includes A. J. Diebold, W. A. Irvin and J. A. Ellen.

Mrs. John Joy Edson, of Sewickley, is visiting Mrs. James Lyall Stuart, of Cochran street at her summer home at Bass Rocks, Mass. Isabel Wardrop, daughter of the Robert Wardrops, of Academy avenue, Sewickley, entertained with a luncheon yesterday.

Mary A. Schloter Weds in Carnegie

This afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Scott, of Beechwood avenue, Carnegie, Miss Mary A. Schloter, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. F. G. Schloter, of Jewett, O., becomes the bride of William Brown, of Pittsburgh, before an embankment of palms and ferns. The bride's father is officiating.

Little Suzanne Scott, as flower girl, is the only attendant, wearing a frock of pale green organdie and carrying sweetheart roses. The bride is wearing a gown of white satin, with a veil of tulle, finished with a cap of tulle caught with orange blossoms. Her bouquet is of butterfly roses and lilies of the valley.

After a reception Mr. Brown and his bride will leave for the East, to live in Pittsburgh upon their return.

Bloomfield Span Is Ordered Closed

Annual Exposition Marks Opening of 1931-32 Season By Woman's Club

The first club in the southwestern district to begin its '31-32 season is the Ligonier Woman's Club, which held its president's day luncheon and annual flower show yesterday in the Fort Ligonier Hotel. Mrs. George S. Naugle surrendered the gavel to Mrs. A. J. McColly, each woman speaking informally of things past and to come. There were soprano solos by Mrs. Ethel Allshouse, with Miss Reba Newton accompanying and among those who spoke briefly were the flower show judges, W. L. Treager, county agent, and A. O. Rassmussen, extension specialist in ornamental horticulture at State College.

The latter stamped the Ligonier show as up to the standard of the many he has already judged this year. He commented on its benefits to the community, saying its influence ultimately reached over the state. Also he mentioned the points taken into consideration in judging and then made suggestions for future shows.

Mr. Treager voiced his appreciation for the women's interest in the 4H clubs, to the members of which he made awards following the luncheon. Twenty-six of the 4H boys and girls had exhibits in the flower show.

Mrs. David T. Denman, member of the Legislature and prominent clubwoman; Mrs. O. G. Leichliter, a Wilkinsburg member of the club; Mrs. W. M. Wynn, president of the Bolivar Current Events Club; Mrs. G. M. Barrow, of the Derry Community Club, and Miss Jane Smith, a member of the Woman's Club of Cairo, Egypt, were others called on by Mrs. McColly for a few words.

The luncheon was attractively appointed, with tinted Queen Anne's lace and baby's breath for the centerpiece, while for favors at the honor table there were dainty garden flower corsages and boutonnieres made by the flower show chairman, Mrs. John Paul Jones.

Three awards were made in each of the 55 classes at the show, which was open to anyone in the Ligonier Valley. There were 229 exhibits, and many of the awards were taken by the 35 clubwomen who exhibited.

Many of the local branches of the Allegheny County League of Women Voters are sponsoring political candidates' meetings prior to the primaries on September 15. Owing to the fact that the league is absolutely non-partisan, no indorsement is given any candidate. Every candidate at the meeting is invited and presented. This gives the citizens of the community an opportunity to become acquainted with all the candidates, so that they will be more than mere names when the voting begins.

The League of Women Voters, co-operating with the Civic Club, the Election Associations and the Allied Boards of Trade, has sent questionnaires to all the candidates, and the results of these findings have been published in a pamphlet.

One of these political meetings will be sponsored by the Bellevue League on Tuesday evening, in the Borough Hall. On September 11, at the same time and place, the local candidates for the school board and other local offices will be presented to the Bellevue public.

The Forest Hills League will present their local candidates, as well as the candidates for county offices on Thursday evening at the Municipal Building, Ardmore boulevard.

Meet In School

On September 9, the Twenty-seventh Ward League will hold a candidates' meeting at the John Morrow School at 8 o'clock in the evening.

On the same day, the Wilkinsburg League, joining with the local paper, the Wilkinsburg Progress, the Civic Club and the Council of Republican Women, will offer the candidates for county offices an opportunity to meet the men and women of the borough at the Wilkinsburg High School auditorium at 8 o'clock.

A mass meeting will be sponsored by the Fourteenth Ward League and the Squirrel Hill Board of Trade in the Taylor Allderdice High School on Thursday, September 10, at 7:15.

On Friday, September 11, at the American Legion Hall on Perrysville avenue, the Twenty-sixth Ward League will hold an open meeting at 2 in the afternoon, inviting the general public to hear the candidates. Mrs. S. D. Locke, chairman, will preside.

DESIGNER PRESENTS NEWEST VOGUE IN SMART ENSEMBLES

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—One finds the ensemble assembled in the best collections. It is not so frequent or as obvious of yore, but it is unmistakably part of the mode. Especially is this so for the afternoon model. At night occasionally one sees an ensemble in white satin or crepe romain, but generally it is the ensemble that shines in the afternoon. Several very charming models have been seen this summer, graceful and gracious in their appeal. They most certainly are a change from the dress with a contrasting short jacket, and for that reason alone deserve attention and admiration. Every now and again one sees a delightful frock with a plain black coat, the collar revers or jabot of the frock being used to trim the coat and link the two garments in the more subtle ensemble manner.

* * *

WE SHOW TODAY a drawing of a most representative summer ensemble. It is from the fine old conservative house of Redfern and is in their best vein. The skirt and long coat are of old ivory-colored shantung with a tiny flower pattern in black. There is an inset of black crepe to give accent to the wide collar. The pleated frills on the sleeve and hem create almost pleasing feminine touch. The coat is fastened at the waistline by two bows of the material. There is a simple tunic of pale green wool lace worn with the circular skirt. The sleeves are short and a puffed box above the elbow. This is an effect that is much in evidence in the Redfern collection.

The wide collar with its revers falls gracefully in soft folds at the front of the surplice bodice. An ideal costume for that day in the hot city that overtakes everyone of us sooner or later.

Studio Buys Sinclair's Parade

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 29.

Unconventional pictures have hit solidly with film audiences this year.

Taking courage, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has bought Upton Sinclair's book, "The Wet Parade," and will make it into a big production in the fall.

Though leaning towards propaganda, Sin's art never fails to be of provocative quality. Also, it [illegible] the public will pay its money to see. You may look to see a marked [illegible] tendency in next year's pictures.

BULLETINS

Due to continued illness of Carole Lombard is out of the cast of "The Greeks Had a Word For It." Director Lowell Sherman and Samuel Goldwyn are conferring on a successor. Carole rehearsed 10 days on the picture and worked a little less than a week before the camera.

Nancy Carroll's argument with Paramount is settled. She will play the feminine lead in Ernst Lubitsch's new picture, "The Man I Killed."

"Too censurable" is the verdict of Paramount officials on Emile Zola's "Nana." Instead, Marlene Dietrich will star in "Shanghai Express," a melodrama of the China coast by Harry Hervey, author of "Conga." Anna May Wong may appear in the picture.

LATEST GOSSIP

The decision of Howard Hughes to abandon "Queer People" will not affect Universal's intention to produce "Once In a Lifetime." Leo McCarey is said to have received in the neighborhood of $50,000 as a settlement on his contract to direct the Hughes film. Lew Ayres will take a six weeks' vacation before making "Gallows" for Universal. The [illegible] may look to see a marked [illegible] tendency in next year's pictures.

Carole Lombard

Greta Garbo

Greta Garbo, young star, has made nine pictures without a rest since he was signed for "All Quiet on the Western Front." He finished "Heaven on Earth" one midnight and went into "The Spirit of Notre Dame" the next morning. Lupe Velez keeps a scrap-book on Greta Garbo. She tells me that if she met the Swedish actress she probably would be struck dumb. And that you have my word for it would verge on the miraculous.

New Manager Assigned Alvin Theater

T. D. Bonneville, who has served as general manager for the Shubert Theater Corporation in Pittsburgh for the past year, has been transferred to the Royal Alexandria Theater, Toronto, Canada. He will be succeeded here by George M. Young, former manager of the Keith Vaudeville Theater in Philadelphia and subsequently manager of the Adelphi Theater in Philadelphia operated by the Shuberts. Mr. Young is now in Pittsburgh.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 29.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

No wonder the Republican party in this country is careful to do nothing to interfere with big banking interests. Over in England the Labor party was in, but they had no money; they get out and a different bunch in. New York and Paris banks leaned 'em a half billion dollars. Big money only goes to the party that supports big moneyed. I am entering no crusade to end it. I am just telling you how it is. You go ahead and change it.

Yours, WILL.

Gotham War On Gangs In Reel

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Dramatic and impressive scenes of New York's pursuit of war on gangland, which culminated in the mammoth mass meeting in Madison Square Garden, are featured in the New York American's [illegible] are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. The pictures show the tremendous crowd of more than 21,000 persons inside the Garden, with as many more vainly endeavoring to seek admission. Former Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby is heard as he opens the meeting over which he presided as chairman. Gen. Smedley Butler, fighting marine who has more medals for bravery in action, probably than any other man, Police Commissioner Mulrooney and Senator Robert Wagner bring forth deafening cheers as they outline plans for the suppression of future outrages and the punishment of criminals.

The starting of the race across the continent from Santa Monica, Cal., to Cleveland by 16 woman aviators is pictured and the route and other details explained fully by the Globe Trotter.

NO ICE SHORTAGE

There are awe-inspiring scenes from off the coast of Labrador and Greenland, where United States coast guard cutters are seeking out and charting the courses of icebergs which are unusually plentiful this year.

Uncle Sam has no use for "dirty" money and Metrotone takes you through the Bureau of Engraving in Washington where you see millions of dollars in old and worn out currency destroyed.

WRESTLING AND SONGS

"Dynamite" Gus Sonnenberg, former mat champion, and Abe Coleman are shown in an exciting wrestling match at Los Angeles. At times it looks more like a battle between a pair of goats as both men butt each other with terrific flying tackles.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.—Remember the item you ran about the girl working for that Socialist paper? . . . In which you tried to give her a break, pointing out that the rag was against capitalists and employers who put the poor worker out of a job?

Yet, that the same rag purchased a machine to address envelopes and fired the little girl who addressed them in long hand? . . . Well, you'll choke when you hear what she had to say. . . . She called and was furious. . . . She sets forth that they are entitled to do with her as they please, and that she will continue to work for them, free, of course, until she can get another job. . . .

That's a form of patriotism I know, but will you please find out what she uses for food and money. . . . The next "Follies" girl to marry is Drusilla Strain. . . . The Goldbergs caged Charles Lindbergh and they've been carrying the scene for weeks. . . . You have an appointment at 7:30 to look over those newsreel shots. . . .

The curtain at the Carroll Theater isn't until 8:30.

Lord Inverclyde, who was just divorced by Jane Tripp in Reno, is now running around London with his first wife, whose husband once threatened to shoot the Prince of Wales because his wife danced with him so much in British East Africa. . . . He was run out of the place, however. . . . Those noblemen are nuts. . . . Cornelius Vanderbilt, Junior, is no. . . . An item, I think is that the beautiful skyline on Central Park South is marred by three electric signs that advertise a hotel and tires. . . . Can you have that stopped, please? . . . That's fine. . . . There is a report making the rounds that the government paid the cost of producing Public Enemy, as it was good propaganda. . . . Sounds radio to me, Sir. . . . Rube Lardner's son, John, is starting how to get post. . . . He became a reporter.

Here's a hot one. . . . Surrogate Wingate was urged by a lawyer the other day to hand down a decision that a Scotchman was stingier than others. . . . For he it from me to point a finger and I'm not one of those persons who was born with a police whistle in my mouth, either. . . . But Mr. Gifford, who was appointed by Mr. Hoover to relieve unemployment, is also president of A. T. & T., which company has laid off more employes than any one could. . . . Jean Ziegfeld's Akerman and her groom are back from Yarrup. . . . Wait'll they find out that there's only one night club open and that the speakeasies sweep the bar at 2:10, they'll be sorry. . . . The British over here call getting drunkee "woofled." . . . The British are too cute.

That rumor about the secret marriage of Robert Garland, the critic, and Queenie Smith, the comedienne, is up again. . . . Miss Smith denies it, however, and Mr. G. is doing a solo honeymoon in Bermuda. . . . They first-nighted it together when he's here, though. The reason Percy Hammond applauded Joseph Sweeney, the villain in "After Tomorrow," when he made his entrance, was explained by the critic. . . . He said that every time he gave Sweeney a good notice the actor was fired. . . . The pastor of the Manhattan Congregational Church is not only vexed, to quote his own wordage, but your line that the church went out of business is wrong and "scurrilous." . . . The church will reopen on September 1, he said, and he tried to make us believe here that it was a purposely-done trick to wreck the church! . . . He asserted that a year ago some revelers in the apartments next door were put out and that they threatened: "We'll get Winchell after you!" . . . Oho! So you're an old-church-goer-after-er, huh?

The police are making it more difficult for the night club chorus girls. . . . They now demand their birth certificates, etc. . . . A general check-up on which girls are going about with gangsters. . . . They claim to know which girls are receiving costly gifts and diamonds from the baddies also, and the police will try to break up these romances. . . . Jack Lait wants to do a piece about you.

Swanson of Collitchumor is in town. . . . When Count Von Luckner is invited to a party he brings 20 people. O, yeah? . . . Poor Iris Adrian of the Follies can go to Hollywood for Fox, her test rating an A—but Ziegfeld no let. Say, I can make up things too! Like this. . . .

Did you notice that the first play of the season opened at the Avon, which theater heads the list alphabetically, and that the last show opened at the Ziegfeld, which is last? . . . Oh very well. I'm merely trying to help—let it go, let it go. . . .

I can just hear you yelling: "And they roast beef!" or "And they dump garbage!" . . . The Norman Fosters (Claudette Colbert) are inseparable. "24 hours of the day," so don't let the envious sway you. Foster has written a play, by the way. . . . Remember the hilarious stories in the papers about a person stealing Reformer Sumner's sign from his office? . . . Well, Madison Kirby, of the Paris Trib was the teaser who swiped it and he got Mr. Sumner's goat, so. Well, Madison died from a fall in Paree. . . . Mrs. E. Nettleson, frau of the newspaper editor, is doing a Duncan on the Paris streets, I hear. . . . Sandals and sheets and nothing else much. Her first name is Eve.

Lenore Ulrich is taking hoofing lessons. . . . Helen Kane is back and plumper. . . . The lace and flowers on Ruth Etting's dress in the "Harvest Moon" number is from the Vanderbilt collection. . . . Melva Cornell, who was in "The New Yorkers" show, is due back with her groom. . . . They are motoring from Roanoke, Va. . . . You can always tell when it is 1 a. m. on Broadway, for that's when the Chevvy sign goes dark. . . . The publisher of that book on Mr. Hoover, the sub-title of which was to be "The Man Who Made US Poor," is sorry you printed that. . . . Because Washington got after him pronto and the sub-tag will be tamer. . . . Can you find out the name of the pretty person whose likeness decorates the Keep Kissable ad? . . . I found out why dramatic critics take their aisle seats late. . . . It isn't because they like to make "an entrance" as the rear-pew-holders think—but because if they sit down early they only have to keep getting up so that the "punctual" playgoers may get by. . . . Awf-veederzane—R. C.

Maybe Mr. Hoover Just Can't Break A Lifetime Habit

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

While rejoicing over Mr. Hoover's relief plans, don't forget the old king who yelled:

"Bring me my revolver and sword. I'm going to fight the Baloochians."

His prime minister explained:

"Why, your majesty, we're not at war with Baloochia. We're at war with Scrammola."

Whereupon the king hollered louder than ever:

"I know it. But I like to fight the Baloochians."

And around December we may discover that Mr. Hoover still loves to feed the Belgians.

Screen Boils Dreiser Down

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

With swift photographic strokes Theodore Dreiser's voluminous word portrait of a phase of modern youth has been confined within the limits of a feature photoplay. And while some may say the picturization of "An American Tragedy" is not Dreiser, it remains that it is an impressive film play.

In substance, what Hollywood has really done to the Dreiser theme is to make it into strong melodrama.

Naturally much of the mental and physical emotions of the novel have eluded both the directorial insight of Joseph von Sternberg and the cameras. But the picture does attain a dramatic directness and power. Certain sequences come upon you like the thrust of cold steel; others come soft and warm and questioning—like mist in the eyes of adolescent youth.

COLD, GRAY FINALE

And who said the movie public must have its happy endings? On the picture's opening day in the Penn yesterday, crowds stood bulging through doorways out onto the sidewalk waiting for a glimpse of cold, gray realism.

Sylvia Sidney, as the desolate heroine, attains the greatest acting heights in the picture. Phillips Holmes, as the boy, strays pretty far from Dreiser in spots, but he never escapes his influence. Irving Pichel gives an outstanding portrayal as district attorney.

Episodic in the beginning, the film swings into its tragedy and climaxing murder trial with pulsing movement. The court room sequences click with the precision of Prussian heels.

SCENE ON THE LAKE

And the scene on the lake—the bottom-up rowboat, the sinking girl, the swimming-away boy—is a "picture" to be remembered.

"An American Tragedy" looks like it will be the most talked-about picture of the year. And it probably will be the target for more conflicting opinions than any film since the talkies have arrived.

On the stage is "Hi Ho Presto," with Fred Keating clowning through the magic. The cast includes Peggy Taylor, the Gary Leon Four, Georgia Hayes and the Chester Hale Girls. Dick Liebert is at the organ and there is an overture by the Penn orchestra.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

THAT BROADWAY of ours is certainly the funniest alley in the world. I know of no other street where men can grow so angry at each other without having anything to grow angry about. Two pals can part with fervent slaps on the back and words of mutual affection. And 10 minutes later, because another man tells him his pal said something about him, the first man will call his pal and accuse him of being a first cousin to a rat.

If you think I'm exaggerating you are quite mistaken. Broadwayites do more actual gossiping in a minute than all the ladies' sewing circles the nation over can put across in a month. A thing that starts as a gag winds up in an argument in nine cases out of ten. The boys are funny that way. They like to worry.

Some years ago, for instance, a couple of Broadway columnists—and there only were a couple in those days—were informed that a certain bad man was out to get them. The information didn't come from a very reliable source, but the columnists were true Broadwayites and worried very easily.

As soon as possible, they sat down to talk it over.

"Maybe we should go to the District Attorney," said the first. "Or maybe it would be better if we called up Johnny Broderick and let him handle it. What do you think?"

The second columnist bit his lip.

"I don't know what to think," he admitted. "That mobster is a pretty tough guy and I don't think he'd stop at anything. I don't know how we offended him, but it must have been something pretty bad. I don't mind telling you I'm plenty worried."

Thus did the columnists cheer each other up. By the time the discussion was over, they both felt that they were tottering on the brink of eternity. The two columnists didn't know their town in those lean days as well as they do now—and I don't mind telling you that both Mr. Winchell and I felt rather blue about the entire situation.

Well, for a week or so, that went on. Neither columnist met the bad man in question and nothing happened to change the situation. But that didn't make the boys feel any better. They walked about Broadway with the feeling that danger was just around the corner.

On a Saturday night, the columnists stepped into the club that Texas Guinan was then operating. Both writers stepped back. There, at a rear table, sat the mobster in question. He had several of his henchmen with him and he was looking in the writers' direction.

One of the columnists squared his shoulders.

"Listen," he muttered, "this thing has gotten on my nerves. If we're going to get plugged, let's have it over with. I'm going over and talk to him."

He marched the length of the room and dropped into a chair beside the man who had worried him so for a week.

"Frank," he said, "I've got to get this off my chest. I understand that you're angry at my pal and me for something we wrote. What's it all about?"

The bad man's eyes opened wide.

"Angry at you and your pal?" he repeated incredulously. "Whoever gave you a steer like that? Isn't it a shame the way people are always startin' trouble?

"Don't say such a thing any more, I can't afford to have you fellers as enemies. Please be my friends, won't you? Can I buy a bottle of wine?"

And when I saw Mr. Winchell's arm drop around the bad man's shoulder, I immediately joined the party.

Gossip is bad enough, but most Broadwayites add fuel to the flame by possessing vivid imaginations. With most of them engaged in business where competition is terrifically keen, it takes but a word to start enmities that may last for a lifetime.

It seems a strange thing to state, but the boys and girls of Broadway are not happy unless they have something to worry about. They go out of their way to look for it. The slightest thing can disturb their entire day; the tiniest annoyance will cause them to rush into hysterics. But, paradoxically enough, if they don't have that tiny annoyance, they are not quite at ease.

What the answer is, I do not know. It may be any number of things. The hectic pace. Jealousy of the guy who's forging ahead. Meanness. A strang desire to hurt. Who knows?

A few days ago, for example, they came and told me that Mr. Lew Brown was angry with me. That amazed me because, while I have often kidded him in print, Mr. Brown knows that I consider him one of the greatest talents in the American theater. With Ray Henderson, he forms a songwriting combination that surely touches genius.

But the boys built me up on the score. They told me this and they told me that. And they had me believing everything—until I met Lew on the street yesterday afternoon. His first words amazed me.

"Say, Mark," he chirped, "the boys tell me you're angry with me. What's the matter?"

I told him I had heard the same thing about him. We both discussed the matter, and laughed at it. And we both wondered what made Broadwayites such strange people.

"It all reminds me, Mark," said Lew, "of the old story of the Irishman and the sleigh. Have you heard it?"

I told him I hadn't. And when he unfolded it, it turned out to be the perfect illustration of the thing about which I have just been writing.

There was, it seems, an Irishman whose wife gazed out at the snow one morning and suddenly sighed for a sleigh ride. If they only had a sleigh, she said, how happy they would be. Her husband clapped his hands.

"O'il get a sleigh," he cried. "Auld Moike Flynn down the road has a foine sleigh. He'll lend it to me and we'll be havin' a great ride."

"But," remarked the spouse, "are you sure he'll be lendin' it to you?"

"Oh, sure," replied her husband. "Moike's a foine frind of mine."

So out into the snow he went, and began to tramp down the road. And as he walked he began to talk to himself.

"Maybe Oi was too hasty," he muttered. "Sure an' how do Oi know thot Moike will lend me his sleigh? Suppose he doesn't? What will Oi tell the woife if he turns me down? Maybe he's not as foine a frind as Oi thought he was? How do Oi know?"

By the time he reached Mike's home he had grown more and more doubtful and, incidentally, more and more angry. He rushed the button and Mike stepped out.

"Hello Pat," he murmured happily. "Glad to see you. What can Oi do for you?"

The husband shook his fist in the other man's face.

"You're a dirty bum," he shouted. "And as far as Oi'm concerned, you can keep your rotten sleigh!"

Secret Call Involves Politics

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"The Secret Call," a romantic melodrama of Big Town political insanity, opened yesterday in both the Fulton and the Sheridan Square. Peggy Shannon and Richard Arlen are co-featured.

The story chiefly concerns a ruthless political boss and a fickle heroine. This girl can't decide whether she wants love or revenge.

The heroine calls Mr. Blake, the political boss, the murderer of her father and ends up in the arms of the same Mr. Blake's son. All of which makes a father-in-law, if not a lot of sense.

SWITCHBOARD DRAMA

Much of the drama is played out on the telephone switchboard of a big hotel. Between calls for ginger ale and ice water, our revengeful heroine gets an earful of "dirty work" that Mr. Blake is trying to put over. And this leaves her in position to get even.

At the climax Mr. Blake finds he is one of those persons who live in glass houses, so, instead of throwing stones he goes into political retirement. Nothing now remains except a story for the newspaper reporters and the happy clinch.

GIVE HER A HAND

The action builds itself into a structure of interest and suspense. But it is rather wobbly, like toy blocks piled on top of one another by childish hands.

Mr. Arlen is his usual boyish self. If it is a political earthquake or toast and coffee this fellow is always the same.

Miss Shannon has the best of it. She landed in the movies as an emergency substitute for Clara Bow and surprised everyone by being an actress. Give her a hand!

The rest of the cast is okay.

ARDENT LOVE NOTES AND PHOTOS SENT 'MAIL ROMEO'

GARAGE YIELDS BOXFUL OF MISSIVES

Correspondents of Suspect Via Matrimonial Agency Live in N. Y., Oklahoma

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 29.—A boxful of burning love letters and photographs of the senders was uncovered today by Clarksburg police in the love-farm garage of Cornelius O. Pierson, alias Harry W. Powers, 45 year old matrimonial agency Romeo suspect in the disappearance of Mrs. Ada Eicher and her three children.

Among the letters were nearly a dozen from an ardent subscriber to the matrimonial agency known as the American Friendship Society. These letters were signed "Bessie" postmarked Olean, N. Y. and carried return address 116 N. Clinton street, One said:

"Connie, I see it all now. I don't belong in the East. I want to go back to the Middle West, where one's neighbor is one's friend. I want to work again among the common people. I want to be called by my first name. I want people to say, 'Hello, Bessie.'

"Please believe, I have found myself. I won't stay here. I am going back West. Honest, I am. Please, Connie, stay by me. I hate the East; honest I do. I want to be among my own kind of people, where I can live natural.

PLEA FOR LETTER

"Today is Wednesday. You will get this Friday. Please write me Saturday so I can get your letter next Monday. Connie, please get a letter to me by Monday morning, July 13—it will be a lucky thirteenth this time.

"Connie, I have come to my senses, I know now where I belong, back West. Please, dear, write to me—I have it all settled now with God and mankind. My brain is clear, I am thinking straight at last. I want to go to work back West.

"Will you write to me? I will turn my back on the East, never to return and even think about it again. If you will write to me, I'll be a new woman. My whole life will be changed.

"Thank you, dear, for making me see. I was blind before I found you. Now I see clearly. Honest, I do. I am so happy. The whole thing is clear to me now.

ASKS FOR 'INSPIRATION'

"Trusting in God to inspire you to write me a letter next Saturday—so I'll get it next Monday, the thirteenth. I am all right now. God has lifted the fog from my brain. Now you can handle me all right. Give me a job either on your ranch, or somebody's farm near your ranch—for the summer. Then when I have made good, you can determine then if you want me or not.

"Trusting and praying to hear from you next Monday, dear old Monday, I am, 'forever your friend.' "BESSIE."

COMPLAINS OF DELAY

In another letter, dated July 21, "Bessie" complains of having to wait for her loved one so long.

One of the many letters accompanying photographs told of the love of "Dottie." Addressed to "Dearest Connie," the letter follows:

"This picture they say isn't me, because I was not smiling enough, but I think it will do, so I will send you one, dear. In case it doesn't please you just send it back, dear. I do not like the smile I had myself, but some day I will see you and then the picture won't be needed, dear. I just sent you a letter this a. m., but had to write you a few lines again. I hope you are not disappointed in your fat little friend.

"Always your "DOTTIE."

DISAPPOINTED MEMBER

From a disappointed member of the American Friendship Society came this missive:

"Sir: I have not heard from you any more since I wrote my last letter to you. I suppose you are no more interested and in that case I beg you to be kind and send my pictures back by return mail, as I intend to leave this city in a few days.

"Respectfully yours,

"Wilma Henkel, 29 Putnam avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y."

Another letter dated the twentieth of this month came from Colbert, Okla. The letter follows:

"Through the F. A. Society I am writing you. Your little article rather suited me, for I am a 'one-man women' as you say. I think if there is anything that is wrong is for a married woman to be paying attention to some other man. I would not marry a man I did not love, for marriage without love is worse than being lonely, and I think when you really love each other you will be true.

DOESN'T SMOKE, DRINK

"Faithful and friendly in time of storm and strife, they come always. Will I tell you a little about myself? Yes. Now, I am a blonde, golden curly hair, 36 years, hazy brown eyes, fair complexion; am 5 feet 5½ inches tall, weigh 143 pounds. I am considered very good looking, a very likable personality. I am kind-hearted and reasonable. I am of a highly respectable family. Was reared on the farm and love the outdoors. I love the West very much.

"I do not smoke, drink or curse. I do so much love a home and someone to care for. If you wish to correspond with me, would like to hear from you.

"Mrs. Vera Davidson, Box 634, Colbert, Okla."

A letter from South Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, tells of the yearning of a 19-year-old girl for a mate. It follows:

"I am a stranger writing to you happening to meet you through Miss Plater, secretary of the American Friendship Society. I understood that you were a widower and that through the heavy work that you carried on you could not make acquaintance with no ladies.

LONGS FOR FRIEND

"I am writing to you cause I'd like you for my companion and my friend. I am 19 years old, and if you want any more description of me you can write Miss Plater.

"The reason why I didn't meet a friend was I'm ashamed to say, but just the same my parents would not allow me to have any companions. That made me sad and lonely. Now I am working out with the nurses and as I long for a friend I thought I'd write you.

"I'm sending you my picture so as to give you an idea of me. Hoping Mr. Pierson that you'll answer this letter for I'm very anxious to hear from you.

"Miss Josephine Kosinsky."

BASHFUL WRITER

Betraying a little bashfulness, a letter from Sylacanga, Ala., dated the twenty-fourth of the month, reads:

"I hardly know how to start writing to anyone I have never seen. I am going to try my luck in gaining a new friend. However, you may not find this interesting enough to answer.

"I guess I will try to describe myself. I am five feet six inches tall and 150 pounds. Have auburn wavy hair, gray eyes, fair complexion, excellent health. Well, guess this is about all I can tell you about myself in this letter. Am having some snap shots made and will send you one in the next letter.

"Hoping to hear from you soon.

"Your new friend,

"Dorothy Craddoc, 1312 Norton Ave."

BUSINESS-LIKE LETTER

Very business-like, another letter dated August 2, from Milwaukee, Wis., comes from a "bachelor girl." The letter follows:

"Your name I received thru the A. F. S. Your description appeals to me very favorably. As I am a bachelor girl, lonesome, have joined the club with the sincere intention. My age is 37. Am enclosing a photo and stamp for return of same. If interested, let me hear about you and will answer any questions you may wish to ask.

"Yours respectfully,

"Agnes Buse, P. O. Box 1835, Milwaukee, Wis."

'ONE-MAN WOMAN'

From Kansas City there is this letter:

"I am taking the liberty of writing you through the society as we both are members. I am hoping you have not already chosen a suitable correspondent that I may hear from you with a more complete description of yourself, also a photo if you don't mind.

"I will give you a description of myself. Am a widow, am 31 years old, am 5 feet 7 inches tall, weigh 130 pounds, some call me a blonde, but have medium brown hair, blue eyes, am fair complexioned, am considered very good looking. I am a one-man woman, for I do not care for friends, as they are only sorrow.

"I have never been in the West, but always wanted to go. But never got started. Don't know much to write now, only K. C. sure dead—ready for burial any time. No one can't afford to go ha-ha.

"Mrs. Lela Hanson, Apt. 18, 1101 E. 11th st., K. C., Mo."

Godparents' Blood Saves Babe, Mother

MRS. ANNA HABAJEC . . . GAVE BLOOD TO GODSON'S MOTHER

Blood given by godparents in a transfusion operation was said by physicians today to have saved the lives of Mrs. Rose Yugasic, 25, of Glenshaw and her new-born babe, now recovering in the Magee Hospital.

The blood was given by Mr. and Mrs. John Habajec, of 4745 Modoc street, who last month were asked to become godparents for the expected baby.

Upon learning of the critical condition of both mother and baby, the Habajecs, along with five other friends and relatives of the patient, volunteered last Sunday evening for the transfusions.

Tests showed Mr. Habajec's blood suitable for the baby, while his wife's corresponded with that of the mother.

Each godparent sacrificed a pint of blood.

NINE PERSONS INJURED BY AUTOS HERE

West Homestead Man Hurt; Munhall Police Hold Man After Hit and Run Accident

Nine persons were injured in automobile accidents in the city last night and early today.

Martin Mulkearn, 35, of 309 Cherry street, West Homestead, suffered a probable skull fracture when an automobile which he was driving crashed into a machine driven by Frank Bukowski of 131 South Twelfth street at South Twenty-fifth and Carson streets, according to police. He is in St. Joseph's Hospital.

According to police report, Mulkearn's automobile a short time before struck a machine driven by Alois Gruber, of 2711 Custer avenue, at Carson and South Eighteenth streets and failed to stop.

GIRL SERIOUSLY HURT

Struck by an automobile while playing near her home, Theresa Sunseri, 7, of 1115 Bingham street, suffered a probable fracture of the skull and was taken to South Side Hospital. Joseph Polteno, of 16 Kennedy street, McKees Rocks, alleged driver of the car, was arrested.

Mercy Hospital authorities and Center avenue police today were endeavoring to establish the identity of a man about 45, whose skull was fractured when he was struck by an automobile reported to have been driven by Anthony Lombardo, of 243½ Baywood drive, Mt. Lebanon, at Seneca street and the Boulevard of the Allies.

E. V. Rollin, of 3143 Villa Wood avenue, Brentwood, was taken to Suburban General Hospital after a truck he was driving collided with an automobile on the Ohio River boulevard, Bellevue.

Harold Shibet, 8, of 5233 Wickliff street, suffered a fractured left leg when he was struck by an automobile driven, police said, by Alfred Steinbaugh, of 1619 Villsack street, in the 4500 block Stanton avenue.

BOY HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Edward Hryaka, 6, of 5109 Lotus way, suffered bruises which were treated at St. Francis Hospital when he was struck by an automobile at Stanton avenue and Lotus way.

Carl Seligman, 25, of 39 Center avenue, Emsworth, a motorcycle driver for a department store, was in the Homestead Hospital suffering a fractured left leg received, police said, when he was struck by an automobile driven by John Stupar, 25, of 125 Dahlia street, Munhall, in Whitaker road. Stupar was held.

George Ross, 53, of Crescent mine, near California, was in the Homestead Hospital suffering injuries received when he stepped from the curb in front of an automobile driven by William Gerhardt, Jr., 25, of 6014 Armour avenue, New Homestead, at Seventh avenue and McDonald street, Homestead, according to police. Gerhardt was held.

Accused of driving away after striking Patsy Johnson, 9, of 631 Ninth avenue, as she was playing near her home, John Chapnak, 23, of 101 Garfield street, Homeville, was held by Munhall police.

SEEKS INQUIRY OF POOR BOARD

K. William Schuchman, candidate for Director of the Poor, today will resume his conferences with District Attorney Andrew T. Park in his efforts to bring about a grand jury investigation into the business methods of the present board of poor directors.

Schuchman insists that the grand jury is the proper body to handle the investigation and that he has presented evidence that one or more of the poor directors was guilty of misdemeanor in office by allotting insurance business through an agency with which one of the directors was connected.

The law dealing with the poor directors states that it is unlawful for any Director of the Poor to be personally interested in any contract for supplies, or maintenance or the improvement of property under his control. A violation is punishable by a fine of $500 and removal from office.

W. Va. Woman Found Drowned in Well

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Mrs. Bertha Lively was found drowned in a well at her home on Davis Creek, near here.

MALONE READY FOR CAMPAIGN

James F. Malone will return to Pittsburgh from Conneaut Lake Monday and immediately interest himself in the county primary campaign.

Malone, who resigned this week as a member of Gov. Pinchot's cabinet, was given a "home coming" last night by his friends at his home in Iowa street. Hundreds called to welcome the former Secretary of Property and Supplies back from Harrisburg.

Although Malone declined to make any direct statement, there were evidences to substantiate the report that Malone will back the candidacy of Senator William D. Mansfield, seeking the Republican nomination for County Commissioner.

It was refusal to support County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern which led to Malone's resignation from the Pinchot cabinet. Malone has been consistently opposed to Senator James J. Coyne, fourth Commissioner aspirant.

Ex-Service Men Start Meetings

The Ex-Service Men's Voting League of Allegheny has begun a series of noon meetings, daily except Saturday and Sunday, in headquarters, 432 Diamond street. Speakers yesterday were Judge D. Paulson Foster, of County Court, candidate for reelection; P. J. McArdle, for City Council and J. J. McGrath, for Judge of County Court. Frank B. Dixon presided.

Scene of Crime Near Home Of Mystery Writer

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 29. Near the country home of the late Melville Davisson Post, famed writer of mystery stories, Clarksburg and Chicago detectives today were unraveling the strange disappearance of Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher and her family.

The mystery swerved to this city with the arrest of Harry F. Powers, 45, Clarksburg grocer, and his subsequent revelation as Cornelius F. Pierson, matrimonial agency Romeo and correspondent and confidant of the missing woman.

And here, around a little ramshackle garage, almost within sight of Post's home on Buckhannon pike, where he wove many of his hair-raising mystery thrillers, authorities believe the mystery was solved today with the confession given police by Powers.

VISIT COURTS, SNEE URGES VOTERS

'See Present Judges for Yourself,' Jurist Says; Lindsay Assails Slate

Judge Sylvester J. Snee, candidate for re-election to Common Pleas Court, today declared that every citizen should visit the court rooms in the City-County Building and the Court House between next Tuesday and primary election day.

He explained that he and his six running mates will resume hearings Tuesday. They are Judges S. H. Gardner, Ambrose B. Reid, W. Heber Dithrich, W. H. McNaugher, J. P. Egan and Joseph Stadtfeld.

INVITES INSPECTION

Judge Snee stated:

"The voters who wish to be truly intelligent in casting their ballots for judges and do not wish to abide completely by the opinions of the lawyers as expressed in the attorneys' referendum, can speedily find out for themselves just what kind of judges are on the bench and what kind of service they are performing."

Alexander P. Lindsay, Independent Republican candidate for Judge of Common Pleas Court, took issue with the sponsors of the seven sitting Judges in some of their statements, in a speech last night in Independent Republican headquarters, 737 Warrington avenue.

'DOCTRINE UN-AMERICAN'

Lindsay said:

"The doctrine advanced by the sponsors of the seven present Judges, that the appointment to the bench should be tantamount to election, is a dangerous doctrine. It is un-American. It means in substance that the people should have no choice in the selection of their Judges, that they must take such men as the Governor chooses to appoint."

Other candidates for Judges of Common Pleas Court include Attorneys Frank A. Piekarski, Thomas M. Marshall, J. Boyd Duff, Jr., Frank F. Canuti and City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt.

N. L. "Skip" Wymard, candidate for Judge of County Court, today, forwarded a letter to Harry G. Samson, chairman of the special Juvenile Court committee of the Federation of Social Agencies, in which he stated that he was heartily in favor of any program that would aid in the restoration to good citizenship of any child brought before Juvenile Court.

URGES YOUNG JUDGE

Attorney James Philip O'Connor, whose name will be first on the ballot as a candidate for Judge of County Court, broadcast a campaign speech last night over WWSW in which he advocated the presence of a youthful Judge to handle cases of minor delinquents that come before that court. O'Connor spoke last night also in the First Baptist Church, Braddock Township, under auspices of the Braddock Township Improvement Association.

Judges D. Paulson Foster and R. A. Kennedy, candidates for another term, were indorsed last night by the Italo-American Social Club of Beechview. Judge Foster was indorsed also by the Scott Township Republican Club. He spoke last night at a meeting of the Collier Township Republican Club at Bishops Corners, near Rennerdale. Judge Kennedy addressed the Men's Club of Aspinwall.

Attacking the plea of the present appointed judges seeking to succeed themselves, that they should be elected because of incumbency, Attorney W. M. Ewing, candidate for Judge of the Common Pleas Court, told an audience in the Seventh Ward Republican Club of McKeesport last night, that the appointed judges will not forget those responsible for their advancement.

BINGAY BOOSTS ARMSTRONG

Declaring that County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong has been the spirit behind an improvement program in Allegheny County, R. V. Bingay, president of the Pittsburgh Stove and Range Company, has accepted the chairmanship of the Finance Committee for Armstrong's campaign. Bingay stated:

"I have been acquainted with Mr. Armstrong 30 years. I have watched him as he climbed step by step to the position he now holds. The people of Allegheny County cannot afford to lose the services of Mr. Armstrong. His honesty, integrity and ability have never been questioned. He is a human man, a good and loyal friend. Everyone who came into close contact with him trusts him and loves him."

Alderman William J. Hughes, of the Sixteenth Ward, has been appointed chairman of the Armstrong campaign in his ward. The squire has always been a supporter of Armstrong, but in the last Mayoralty fight, Hughes ran James F. Malone's campaign in the Sixteenth Ward.

Fred E. Dengler, member of the City Tax Board, and Republican chairman of the ward, is managing the campaign in his bailiwick for State Senator James J. Coyne, candidate for County Commissioner, evidently with the approval of Mayor Kline.

MEETING LINKS ARMSTRONG, MANSFIELD

Braddock Rally Hears Both Candidates; Commissioner Late, Session Reassembles

Further surface evidence of a hook-up between County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong and State Senator William D. Mansfield in their candidacies for County Commissioner, was apparent last night at a meeting in the auditorium of Sacred Heart Church, Braddock. Clarito Purchasing Agent M. J. Verosky, the acknowledged Braddock leader of the Republican organization. The meeting was a rally for Attorney Frank A. Piekarski, candidate for judge of Common Pleas Court, who spoke and received an ovation.

Mansfield was among the first speakers of the evening and was followed by Register of Wills Joseph N. McAvoy, Clerk of Courts S. J. Tooley, Prothonotary John Vogt, Recorder of Deeds Samuel D. Foster, District Attorney Andrew T. Park and Attorney Benjamin Leitner, candidate for Judge of County Court.

Sometime after 10 p. m. Val C. Kolaski of the United Polish Societies, who presided, announced that Armstrong must have been unavoidably delayed and that the meeting was adjourned. However, while a local performer was singing an exit song, Armstrong appeared and the meeting again convened.

Verosky was asked if the presence of Armstrong and Mansfield to the exclusion of the other candidates could be interpreted as his choice for the heads of the ticket. He replied:

"Well, I wouldn't say that. I'm for the organization."

RECORD DROP IN CIGARET OUTPUT

Trade Bought Ahead for Increase in Price; New Wrapping Upset Rates

NEW YORK, Aug. 29 — Undoubtedly influenced to a considerable degree by changes in the tobacco industry, cigaret production in the United States in July showed the greatest drop in the history of the [illegible] 1,158,311,748, or 9.78 per cent from the [illegible] July 1930.

The advance of 45 cents a thousand in the wholesale price for cigarets on June 24 undoubtedly was responsible for a good part of the output decline in July. When the price is advanced retailers and jobbers are given the opportunity of purchasing two weeks' supply of cigarets at the old price. Merchants take full advantage of such an opportunity and this year probably purchased in June a considerable amount of cigarets that would have been bought in the next month.

WRAPPERS CHANGED

This is in contrast to the preceding price advance which was made on October 5, 1929. Purchasing two weeks' supply of cigarets at the price prevailing before that price advance would not have brought into October part of November's business. In consequence the upward trend then prevailing continued and cigaret production in November 1929 increased 504,616,850 or 5.91 per cent.

Another factor accounting in part for the drop in July was the changeover from glassine to cellophane wrapping by leading cigaret companies. Reynolds introduced the cellophane wrapper last March and was quickly followed by Lorillard. Liggett & Myers placed Chesterfield cigarets on the market late in July in cellophane wrappers and American Tobacco Company also followed with Lucky Strike. Shortly after the [illegible] to handle cellophane wrappers manufacturers naturally drew as much as possible on stocks and produce a few cigarets as possible to be wrapped in the old style wrapper.

DECLINE MARKED

Cigaret production for July this year, at a total of 10,699,528,523 compared with the record figure of 11,858,840,263 for the 1930 month. July last year showed an increase in cigaret production of 10.59 per cent, the greatest gain of any month in the year and the largest percentage gain since October, 1929, so that the adverse effect on production of the factors outlined above was accentuated. Output in July, 1929, amounted to 10,724,402,990.

Seven months' production although below that of the like period of 1930, remained ahead of that of the comparable period of 1929.

Carriers Define Rate Advance Plea

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 — The committee on public relations of the eastern railroads contends the 15 per cent increase sought by the carriers was proposed without any thought of increasing revenue sufficiently to earn a fair return.

On the other hand, it is said the increases were considered as the minimum necessary to enable the carriers during the present emergency to operate their properties safely, serve the public adequately, restore their impaired credit and through additional capital expenditures to effect further economies in operations.

The railroads are not seeking to escape their fair share of the general business depression, according to the committee.

Stock Exchange Topics

Bendix Aviation Heavily Bought in Recent Sessions

That there was heavy accumulation in Bendix was evident in the market at times this week. Most of the buying has been on the belief that the new free wheeling device perfected by the company will prove a good factor in earnings. It is said the new product retails at $18.50 and will fit any car. Without this new product Bendix did quite well this year, earnings for the first half having been equal to 72 cents a share, compared with 50 cents paid out in dividends for that period. Two other products of the company are an automatic starting device and a new type of grease gun. Speculative interest in the stock has been increasing in the past month or so.

Although there has been some criticism in American Can, quite a large short interest still exists. So many rumors have been circulated regarding the affairs of the company, including earnings, the extra dividend, law suits, etc., that the bears attacking the stock were aided by a small amount of outside liquidation and short selling for public account. Earnings of $6 a share this year would be considered satisfactory in view of general conditions, and the plan to declare the extra dividend is evidence of the confidence of the management in the prospects for next year.

Meetings are to be held again next month for the purpose of reaching some agreement on curtailment of copper production. Interests in Canada have informed local representatives that the Dominion mining authorities do not anticipate an agreement on the matter. They are of the opinion that the law of supply and demand will be a governing influence with the copper price affected by the extent of the buying and the willingness of consumers to take the metal. Therefore, they are predicting that some of the high-cost companies will be compelled to shut down entirely unless there is a change for the better in copper trade conditions.

Better sentiment has been in evidence recently regarding the shares of motion picture companies, largely due to the expectation of improvement in earnings with the passing of the summer months. Seasonal influences are powerful in this industry, and an upward trend in attendance at motion picture theaters usually stimulates a sympathetic movement in securities of this group. Particular optimism prevails regarding the outlook for this fall in view of the exceptional grasp which amusement companies have succeeded in gaining on expenses. Moreover, the opinion is expressed in trade circles that the appeal of the films to be released in coming months will be much greater than has been the case thus far in 1931.

What is termed a "buyers' market" exists in bonds. There is an extraordinary thin market in many of the lesser known issues. Some of these have suffered severe declines, although the condition of the companies represented did not warrant the sharp reactions. A factor in some of these issues has been the forced sales by business men for the purpose of realizing funds for their own particular businesses. Several of the bonds which have suffered sharp declines are issues which rarely sell and have what is known as a "one bond" market. Individuals having one or 20 bonds to sell had to dispose of them often at a great sacrifice because there were bids for only one of the bonds in the regular market and a substantial spread between the prices at which they were taken.

The milk bottle industry does not appear to be as depression-proof as many contended earlier in the year, judging by the sales of Thatcher Manufacturing, the country's largest maker of that article. The company just barely earned its preferred dividend for the first six months of the current year and, as a consequence, omitted the common payment due about this time. Competitive conditions have resulted in lower prices for milk bottles and affected income of Thatcher adversely. There has been some talk of competition from manufacturers of paper containers, but this is not considered serious by interests close to Thatcher.

SPOT GASOLINE MARKET EASY

CHICAGO, Aug. 29 — The spot gasoline market is slightly easier with United States motor grade quoted close to five cents a gallon. Jobbers appear to be out of the market while refiners with any amount of material on hand seem anxious to move it. Oil circles attribute the easing off to the usual month-end lull as well as the failure of more of the major companies to post higher prices for Oklahoma and East Texas crude. General opinion is that the easiness is only temporary and that higher prices probably will be seen shortly after the first of the month.

Spectator

Dividend Strategy. Important Reports Due. Rail Rally Significant.

—By Wall Street Spectator—

NEW YORK, Aug. 29 — DIVIDEND POLICIES of the directors of industrial and railroad companies have exerted a considerable influence on stock price movements in recent weeks. Investment buyers of corporation stocks are naturally more interested in the maintenance of stable dividend payments than in the day-to-day fluctuations of the price of their stocks, and frequent "switches" have been made by those seeking more substantial evidence of the continuance of earnings sufficient to cover dividends.

BETWEEN THIS DATE and Labor Day the following companies will take action on dividends on common stock: General Electric, Mack Trucks; Bush Terminal; General Railway Signal; Borg-Warner; American Waterworks; Lehigh Valley Railroad; Phelps Dodge; J. I. Case; May Department Stores; National Tea; R. J. Reynolds; Electric Storage Battery; Loews, Inc.; Kennecott Copper, and Tennessee Corporation.

IN THIS LIST we find a number of the country's outstanding representatives of important manufacturing and transportation industries, and it is quite likely that their directors at the dividend meetings may issue reports or comments throwing important light on strategic sections of American industry.

FOR THE SECOND successive session, railroad bonds rallied sharply yesterday, suggesting that bargain-hunters are ready to employ a larger share of their funds to back up their judgment of the financial stability of American railroad companies. Turning back the records of history, we find that in the depression of 10 years ago, railroad bonds and industrials both declined steadily in the spring and early summer, but advanced spectacularly from July through the remainder of the year. Improvement in railroad earnings might easily turn the tide of rail bonds upward.

Cuba Is Uncertain Factor in Sugar

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 — (AP) — A new uncertainty in the sugar industry exists in Washington because of the revolution in Cuba.

The island is one of the chief sugar producers of the world and a participant in the Chadbourne plan to curtail output and restrict exports to enable the world markets to clear their overstuffed shelves. The uncertainty apparently lies in whether any probable new government in Cuba would recognize the island participation in the plan.

Construction Plans Total $25,678,000

Construction Daily reports. This figure corresponds with $52,751,000 last week and $17,856,000 in the corresponding week last year.

STOCK SHARES IRREGULARLY HIGHER

U. S. Steel, American Can, Case Gain Fractionally; Rails Show Weakness

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(AP)—The stock market pushed quietly higher in the early trading today.

The market was extremely sluggish but maintained the somewhat more cheerful tone which developed yesterday, and by the end of the first half hour gains of from ½ to 1½ points were registered by several prominent issues.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

AUGUST STEEL PRODUCTION DOWN

Recent Price Stabilization To Aid Trade in Future; Autumn Gain Expected

By B. E. S. LEE

Steel demand as a whole has been practically stationary this month as indicated by production, which for the four successive weeks may be estimated at about 32, 33, 31 and 32 per cent. July averaged 34 per cent as shown by the official report but there was no decrease in current demand this month for in July there was production in completion of some old orders. In standard pipe there was a distinct increase this month.

The important point is that in the last two or three weeks there has not been the increase that might be expected as a forerunner of the substantial autumn increase so confidently predicted two months and more ago. Increase is still expected, but only of mild character as several important lines cannot be counted on for any increase.

PRICE BOOST LIKELY

For the future the most favorable feature of the steel situation is the price stabilization that has recently occurred and not merely stabilization indeed but an advancing tendency for recent advances in sheets, strips and wire products which had been showing losses have been successful to date and if prices continue to hold as is expected, attempts at further advances for fourth quarter are altogether likely. Success in the respective lines has increased the courage of the whole producing trade.

Long ago mills entirely abandoned the notion that costs could be commensurately reduced by seeking a heavier operation through price shading. As usual, special concessions are made on large construction jobs but such work represents decidedly less than 10 per cent of the total tonnage going as the steel movement nowadays is of wholly diversified character, represented by very numerous orders very small individually.

AUTO CALL UP

There are as heavy rail releases for the next few weeks as would be expected for this time in relation to production during the first half of the year. Chicago district rail mills have scheduled a 20 per cent operation for a time while rail production in the Pittsburgh district is intermittent. No predictions are ventured as to the size of the annual buying movement which by precedent should begin late next month. There is no little old tonnage still to be delivered.

Steel orders from the automobile industry have increased slightly, but not to the extent that would support recent predictions of a large increase in the month's automobile production. There are suspicions that some makers have decided to save their ammunition, in the form of new models, until there is more to shoot at.

TIN ACTIVITY OFF

Sheets and standard pipe are picked out as particularly promising lines for seasonal improvement next month. The Stanolind Pipe Line Company, a Standard Oil subsidiary, is likely to place very shortly orders for 36,000 tons of line pipe, to run from the new East Texas field to connection with existing lines. In general the line pipe season is near its end.

Tin plate mill operations continue markedly on the down grade, this week being estimated at 47 per cent against 65 per cent two months ago, a quite unusual seasonal drop caused by light packs of some of the vegetables and a decrease in general line consumption. Since late last year exports have been uniform at scarcely more than one-third of the old rate, steadily maintained for nearly five years.

BUSINESS FAILURES FEWER IN JULY

CHART CLEARLY SHOWING U. S. BUSINESS FAILURES IN SHARP DECREASE DURING JULY

A new graph showing that business failures, after reaching an all-time high in January, decreased until during July they were on a level with 1930, as were the liabilities involved. Interpretation: The business failures in the past few months were caused by poor business in 1930 and earlier this year, so that July's record offers business encouragement.

BUSINESS INDEX AGAIN LOWER

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—By Labor Day August will probably have put in its claim for the closely-contested honor of being the much heralded, honest-to-goodness bottom, and may win by the nose of an index number over July and last December, says the Business Week in its report for the week ending today. The third week of August gives no sign of expected seasonal improvement and skepticism about its prospective strength increases.

The endurance dance of this industry's prolonged depression ought by all odds to end this month if ever. Precedent of 1921 favors this hopeful prospect, for in the summer of that year stocks and trade sloshed along in uncertain stagnation as they have this time till September. A strikingly similar advance improvement in textiles and other consumer industries, accompanied by sporadic strength in individual stocks standing out from the general list has appeared. Commodity price levels have shown unusually early and prolonged stability, and exports seem to have reached a resistance level.

The business index continues to slide down to new lows, falling to 71.8 for the week ended August 22 against 72.6 in the preceding week and 88.9 in the same week last year.

GLASS TRADE MARKS TIME

Except for increased production of figured and wire glass, there has been no change in the flat glass industry, according to American Glass Review. Generally, the industry is coasting along and looking forward to October and November, when demand for flat glass for building purposes usually reaches its peak for the year. During the period of dullness in demand and production various elements are giving thought to stabilization in the window glass field and for the good of all and the future of window glass it is to be hoped something concrete can be done.

For some months production of figured and wire glass was at a standstill and demand was filled from stocks. In the past 30 days three units at least have resumed operations, wholly or in part, so that production of figured and wire glass is probably greater now than it has been at any previous time of the year. The gain in production does not necessarily mean increased demand, although it does indicate that demand while slow, has been steady and in sufficient volume to use up stocks of many varieties.

Will Discuss Steel Building Problems

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Local as well as national problems in the field of steel construction will be given consideration at the ninth annual convention of the American Institute of Steel Construction, which will be held at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., October 28 to 30, inclusive. The general conferences will be given over entirely to the usual formal addresses and discussions of national problems of the industry.

The discussions will be divided equally between the technical problems of construction and the economic problems of selling. All the formal speeches of the convention will be made by persons drawn from the industry, no outside talent being enlisted upon this occasion.

Sign of Future Trend May Appear in September

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

BUSINESS IS APPROACHING a critical period. During the summer there has been a moderate decline in activity. There has been nothing exceptional about this. Such a reduction usually takes place even in good years. But with the end of hot weather a spurt in activity usually takes place in this district. This improvement normally lasts until the year end suspension for inventory taking purposes.

The extent of the September improvement will be significant since it may indicate whether business activity is to continue at a low rate through the winter or whether the bottom has been reached and an upward climb towards more satisfactory conditions is being started.

If this seasonal gain is slight, as it was at the beginning of the year, business probably will have to wait for 1932 for a revival. If the gain is of more than normal proportions, optimistic predictions of the future may be justified.

Wages Still Uncertain

THE STEADINESS OF COMMODITY prices is taken as an indication that liquidation of this type has run its course. The decline in commercial failures shows that the elimination of weak sisters from the business picture is about over. The stock market has been making no noticeable progress in either direction and the continued shrinking of brokers' loans has contributed to the belief that the worst is over as far as stock prices are concerned.

There remains only one other type of liquidation which may be necessary before the entire job has been completed. Economists are not in agreement on the question of whether or not this last type of liquidation is desirable.

In spite of widespread opposition and the fear of permanent reduction of purchasing power, the belief is becoming more general the liquidation of wages must take place.

This movement has had a substantial start this year. The widespread salary reductions may be a predecessor of a similar movement where the shop forces are concerned. The chief objection to the plan lies in the fact that most industrial workers already are suffering from reductions in working time which have cut their earnings far more sharply than those of office workers.

No Indications Seen

UP TO THE PRESENT time there have been practically no indications on which to base predictions of the future course of activity. Business is at the low point of the depression. It seems improbable that the decline will go much further. Outside of the uncertainties of the foreign situation, there are no influences on the horizon which should exert a further depressing influence. On the other hand a stimulating influence to bring about the recovery is not in sight.

65 Roads Report July Profits Off

The first 65 railroads to report July earnings had net operating income amounting to $49,972,000 compared with $72,581,000 in the same month last year, a reduction of 31.1 per cent.

In June, their net operating income amounted to $45,294,000, which was a decline of 25.6 per cent below June, 1930. July also was a decline of 52 per cent below the same month in 1929.

Files Suit Against Paramount-Publix

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Joseph Balter, of Boston, has filed suit to restrain the Paramount-Publix Corporation from continuing to fulfill a repurchase agreement under which it is buying back at $80 a share issues of its own stock with a current market value of only $20 from theatrical corporations to which it issued them in exchange for interests.

SCHOOL PLANS TO EXPAND FACILITIES

Accountancy Institution Will Graduate Record Number in September

In order to accomodate the record enrollment for next term, Pittsburgh School of Accountancy is expanding its classroom facilities. The faculty has been proportionately enlarged. Several certified public accountants have been added in the accounting department. Only members of the Pennsylvania Bar, many of whom are assistant United States district attorneys, are retained as law instructors. The faculty consists of about 30 members and is constantly growing with the demand for practical education.

The school has a unique policy in connection with its course, enabling its students to cope with the experience required in obtaining positions. The students after completing their first semester are permitted to go into the offices of some 50 or more local establishments to apply the theoretical knowledge they have acquired in the classroom to everyday problems in modern business.

OFFERS PACE COURSE

The school offers one of the oldest courses in accountancy and business administration in the United States, the Pace course. This course has been included in the curricula of leading universities and has been adopted by some of the larger corporations for the training of employes.

September 26 Pittsburgh School of Accountancy will graduate the largest class in its history. Some 90 young men will receive diplomas. The graduation program includes speeches, award of prizes for scholastic ability, presentation of diplomas and entertainment.

RETAIL TRADE ACTIVITY UP

There has been slightly greater activity in retail trade, particularly with the department stores, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Sales are being stimulated by extensive advertising and the early opening of the public schools.

Demand for women's fall wearing apparel is somewhat stronger, but men's and boys' clothing are still dragging. Textiles are in slightly better demand, although the movement of drygoods, as a whole, continues slow. Demand for men's hats is not very active as yet, and shoes, with exception of the cheaper grades, continue to move slowly. Groceries and provisions are in fair demand, with prices continuing on a low level.

In the majority of lines collections continue to average slow.

PA. OIL GROUP TIGHTENS UP RULES

Wholesalers to Pay Yearly License; Regulations on Trademark Use Stricter

OIL CITY, Pa., Aug. 29.—Effective immediately, the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association has adopted new and stronger regulations under which wholesalers of pure Pennsylvania oil will be licensed to use the nationally advertised trade-mark of the association in their advertising and selling.

Prominent among the new conditions is the requirement that every concern licensed by the association to use the association trade-mark in connection with his private brand shall pay a yearly fee, varying, according to the nature of his business and the number of brands he sells, from $50 to $500 or more. Each brand will be assigned a separate license number.

The growing tendency of retailers to capitalize the association trade-mark as a brand of pure Pennsylvania oil caused the adoption of a new regulation to the effect that the association emblem must never be used in such a way as to create the impression that it is a brand, the private brand or trade name of the oil must always be displayed in advertising more prominently than the association emblem and the association name must never be used in such a way as to mislead anyone into thinking that the association produced or refined the oil.

The Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association is planning to function in coming months more vigorously than ever before. Its national advertising in behalf of 100 per cent pure Pennsylvania oils will be continued aggressively and the vigilance work or policing of the entire country to detect substitution and misrepresentation through improper use of the association trade-mark is being trebled.

Surplus Freights Show 6,013 Gain

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Class 1 railroads on August 14 had 574,384 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the American Railway Association announced today. This was an increase of 6,013 cars compared with August 7, at which time there were 568,371 surplus freight cars.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The list of representative companies having reported for the first half of the current year now numbers 527, with aggregate net income of $578,409,000, against $1,021,954,000 in the similar period of 1930, says the Standard Statistics Company.

CHANGES MAY COME BEFORE RACE ENDS

AS PUBLISHED IN The Sun-Telegraph last Tuesday, there are unmistakable signs that the Pittsburgh baseball club will have a new manager and a changed lineup next year, and latest indications are that some of the major shifts proposed may be made even before the end of the present season unless there is an immediate brace in the work of the club under Jewel Ens. President Barney Dreyfuss is said to be losing patience rapidly as a result of the continued failure of the team to produce better results, and according to rumor it wouldn't take much more to lead him to start on the big house-cleaning job right away instead of waiting until 1932.

Barney Dreyfuss

The Bucs are showing no promise of pulling themselves together in a way to offer hope of a strong finish. They are not taking advantage of the opportunity confronting them to rise even as high as fifth place before the curtain falls. A victory yesterday while Boston was idle would have put the Bucs within four points of the position, but the defeat set them back a game and a half behind the Braves. They have slipped the same way every time they had a chance to advance.

THIS WAS THE Pirates' fourteenth defeat in their last 21 games and their continued failure to show an improvement in form, or in the cases of some few players, an improvement in spirit, is reported to have brought the owners to such a point of desperation that they may take the club out of Ens' hands at an early date if there isn't a quick change for the better.

And it is understood that it is not only the managerial end that has failed to satisfy the higher officials. One player is reported to have been fined for careless fielding in a recent game, and it is said that another may soon be ordered out of the lineup and put on the shelf pending a winter deal that will send him elsewhere for next season.

IT IS EXPECTED that when the ax falls at the end of the season or before, among the men to go will be a coach who has incurred the displeasure of the bosses by disregarding some of the rules laid down by them.

In short, according to rumor, President Dreyfuss is determined to get better baseball for his patrons by tearing the present machine apart and may not wait until the end of the season before beginning work on the proposed big shakeup.

IT WILL NOT be surprising if the permanent return of Gus Suhr to first base turns out to be part of the reconstruction plan. The club heads are known to have a lot of confidence in Suhr, and feel that with the right encouragement and a fair chance to stay in the game steadily Gus will prove a valuable regular. President Dreyfuss remains mum on the reported plan to make a managerial change this fall or next spring, but it is believed no member of the present club is being considered as a possible successor to Ens. The Pirate owner did consent to spike a report published in New York that Dave Bancroft, coach of the Giants, was being sought to manage the Bucs. The local magnate said he would not consider Bancroft at any time.*

Willis S. Kilmer

So he is sending Sun Beau after $25,000 additional today by starting him in the Lincoln Handicap at Lincoln Fields. The 6-year-old wonder horse is favored in the betting to get away this latest contract, too, though he is likely to be given some stiff opposition by some of the other entrants, including Theodore F. Mueller's 3-year-old, Pittsburgher.

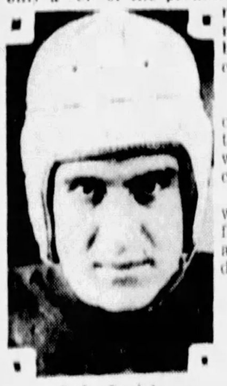
TOO BAD ABOUT Mickey Cochrane being in such bad shape. Reported so near to a breakdown that he had to be sent to the seashore for a long rest in order that he might have a fighting chance to recover in time to play in the world series, Mickey bobbed up in the lineup of the A's yesterday, and he was so feeble that all he could do was to make three of the Mackmen's 10 hits, the third of which knocked in the run that beat the Yankees.

Cochrane's "breakdown" caused him to miss only four games Mickey, by the way, has passed the hundred mark again in games played for the season. This is the seventh consecutive year in which the great catcher has gone beyond the century line.

ANSWERING SEVERAL QUERIES received from "Daily Reader": The highest batting mark ever reached by a major league player for a season? Hugh Duffy's .438 for the Boston Nationals in 1894; Tip O'Neill hit .492 for St. Louis in the American Association in 1887, but in that year bases on balls were counted as hits. Player who made the highest number of hits in a season? George Sisler, 257, for the Browns in 1920. Most errors by a player in a season? Joe Sullivan's 106 at shortstop for the Washington Nationals in 1893. Pitcher's strikeout record for a season? Amos Rusie's 345 for the Giants in 1890. Batter who struck out most times in one season? Gus Williams, of the Browns, 120 times in 1914.*

ONE OF THIS district's most popular boxing figures of earlier years is coming back to the game as a manager, besides having thrown his hat into the political ring. Eddie Wimler, who is a candidate for constable of Overbrook, now the Thirty-second Ward of Pittsburgh, is putting together a stable in which he will have from six to eight fighters, and he plans to keep them all busy during the approaching indoor season.

If they give the same satisfaction that Eddie himself gave in his fighting days, from 1910 to 1926, they are certain to win the approval of the fans, for the crowd was assured a real fight every time Wimler appeared on a card. Joe Lynch, Memphis Pal Moore, Jabez White, Joe Burman, Chick Suggs, Sammy Sandow and Rocky Richards were only a few of the prominent outsiders Eddie met, in addition to his memorable bouts with all the home boys near his weight. Incidentally, Eddie's brother, Chalk, also is talking of trying a comeback as a fighter.



Judy Lasich

JUDY LASICH, of Clairton, who will be captain of the Penn State football team this fall, figures to be about the hardest worked player on the squad during the 1931 campaign of the Nittany Lions.

This will be the third straight season in which Lasich has held down the varsity fullback job for Penn State, and indications are that he will be called on for plenty of duty again.

BUT LASICH APPEARS to thrive on hard work. His service record in football at State is a standout and puts him among the modern iron men of football. Last season Lasich took part in every one of the Lions' nine games, playing a total of 454 minutes, or a fraction more than 30 quarters. This means that Judy's actual playing time was equivalent to eight full games in the nine-game schedule. In several contests he played the full 60 minutes. Only one other Lion player, Calvin Shawley, left tackle, had more time to his credit. With State a bit shy on experienced backs, it is probable that Lasich will spend even more than 454 minutes in the thick of the fighting this year.

RIVALS BATTLE FOR WESTERN HONORS

HIGHLAND PARK, Ill., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Two of the stoutest-hearted campaigners of golf, Mrs. Leona Pressler, of San Gabriel, Cal., and Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, faced each other today in the final fight to the finish for the women's western championship.

Mrs. Pressler, who wore the crown for two successive years in 1927 and 1928 was a slight favorite although she was confronted by a difficult task in disposing of her rival, who marched through the hardest bracket of the two and climaxed it yesterday by defeating Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, in a 19-hole overtime match.

Mrs. Hill, who succeeded Mrs. Pressler as champion in 1929 by winning that notable match from Gregg Lifur, of Los Angeles, was very much on her game and a result one way or the other wouldn't cause any surprise.

The two have met but once before and that was in the semi-finals in 1928 at Indian Hill. Mrs. Pressler defeated Mrs. Hill in that battle, but the struggle lasted to the final putt on the final green. Mrs. Pressler winning one-up, and going on to win the crown.

Mrs. Hill's match against Miss Van Wie yesterday was the most stirring battle of the tournament. Two down at nine and 1 down at 16, Mrs. Hill came back to square the match on the seventeenth, hold her rival even on the eighteenth and then win with a shaky 6 on the extra hole when the heavy headwind carried Miss Van Wie's second shot out of bounds.

Mrs. Pressler romped into the finals by the other extreme, defeating June Beebe, 18-year-old Chicago girl, 5 and 4.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE CURSED RIVER—The Saco River, in Maine, has suffered from a strange curse for the last 256 years, or since King Philip's War in 1675, when the curse was pronounced by the Indians. The squaw of Squando, chief of the Sokokis tribe of Indians, was paddling her way across the stream, bearing with her in the craft the first-born child of the sagamore. At that period there was prevalent in England the belief that an Indian papoose could swim instinctively from birth, and the sailors from a British vessel at anchor in the river, in attempting to prove or disprove the idea, upset the squaw's canoe and the Indian child was drowned. The Indian woman then swore upon the river a curse, asking that the gods sacrifice three white persons each year in revenge. Since that time three people have been drowned each year in the Saco, a large majority of them being killed in the dangerous rapids. THE WORKMAN WHO DUG IN ONE SPOT FOR SEVEN YEARS—The Pitch Lake of Trinidad, an immense deposit of pure asphalt, is in itself one of the most unique physical phenomena of South America. It is a semi-viscous lake of "ready-made pavement," and, although millions of tons of it have been removed, a like amount has bubbled up from the earth keeping the lake full. One workman worked in exactly the same spot for seven years, digging a hole nine feet long, six feet wide and two feet deep each day, and, when he came back in the morning the hole always had filled up.

MONARCHS PLAY GRAYS HERE

The Homestead Grays and the Kansas City Monarchs will resume their five-game series, which they opened last night at Akron, by playing a doubleheader at Forbes Field today. The first game will get under way at 2 o'clock.

The fourth and fifth games of the series will be played tomorrow in Cleveland.

The Monarchs, one of the leading Negro teams of the country, and the Grays battled through an eight-game series last year. Last night, the Monarchs got the jump in the present series by winning 6 to 5. Five errors by the ninth inning enabling the Monarchs to win out.

Today's hurling selections are in doubt, although Radcliffe, who hurled a six-inning, no-hit, no-run game Wednesday, is the likely choice for one fray.

Other sandlot encounters today include the Homewood-Dormont City League fray at Dormont; the Immaculate Heart-Iroquois, Verona-Jenkins and Wally Smith-Mur tussles in the Greater Pittsburgh loop and the Oliver Cubs-Speer and East End Cardinal-Lawrenceville frays in the Steel City circuit.

BEN WINS "FASTEST AMERICAN LEAGUER" LAURELS

In the 100-yard dash to determine the fastest man in the American League, staged in the Chicago White Sox park recently, Ben Chapman, of the Yankees, defeated Carl Reynolds, of the Chisox, by a margin of three yards. Chapman's time was 10.4, the timers at the left decided. Ben almost crowded Carl out of the picture, both figuratively and literally.

JACK BEATS THREE

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, knocked out big Tom Sawyer, Vancouver heavyweight, in 1 minute and 15 seconds and then took on two other fighters in a boxing exhibition here last night. Tiny Lamar, Tacoma heavyweight, lasted one round, but was knocked down twice for counts of eight and five. Del Wolfe, of Bellingham, Wash., went two rounds, landing one heavy right to Dempsey's head, which apparently failed to shake Dempsey.

SINGER STOPS MARTIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Al Singer, former world lightweight champion, started a comeback campaign last night by technically knocking out the veteran New Yorker, Eddie (Cannonball) Martin in the second round of their scheduled 10-round bout at the Coney Island Stadium. Martin, one time bantamweight king, was no match for the husky Singer and lasted only a minute and 34 seconds of the second round.

MAIER SCORES KAYO

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—Dave Maier, Milwaukee heavyweight, won a knockout victory over Buck Everett, Gary, Ind., in the fifth round of their scheduled 10-round bout here last night. Maier weighed 175½, and Everett 179 pounds. Another Milwaukeean, Fred Tomkins, won a decision from Bobby Stewart, Havana, Cuba, in their six-round match. The Milwaukee fighter weighed 135 pounds and Stewart 133.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 29.—One bad inning in a furiously fought ball game represented the cause of the gloom in the Pirate camp this morning. The Pittsburghers, in yesterday's clash with the league-leaders, were four runs in front as late as the seventh inning, and it looked as if the Buccos would do something to delay flag festivities of the Redbirds, but Larry French wavered a bit in his control in the seventh and Pie Traynor lost his in the eighth when he opened the way for a deadlock with a bad throw.

Sparky Adams, who was given scant opportunity to prove his worth in Pittsburgh, then laid it onto his former mates with a fine double that won the battle for the home team. The score was 6 to 4.

MEINE TO HURL

Heinie Meine, who owns two shut-out victories over the pace setters, will heckle them this afternoon in the second game of the series. The Redbirds do not like to see the Prince of Luxemburg walk to the mound. Yet, on the other hand, the Cards are acting like real champions and the Buccos therefore will have to step on the gas if they are to slow them down. Sylvester Johnson is ticketed to pitch for the home guards.

The relentless fight waged by the Cardinals when they were far in arrears yesterday, stamps them as the type of club that measures up to championship qualities. Aided by some keen support, Larry French shut the door in the faces of the St. Louis flock through six rounds, but they refused to give up in the face of the odds.

A disputed play at second base now stands out as a pivotal part of the Redbird victory. Manager Ens and other Pirates aver they had Charley Gelbert doubled for the third out of the seventh inning a few minutes before Frank Frisch slapped out a double that

Says Nick Altrock

—Baseball's Comedian—

BOSTON, Aug. 29.—The Cardinals are getting ready for the World Series by practicing every morning with American League balls. They should practice in front of snapping turtles to get used to American League umpires, too.

Nick Altrock

I see they're dibbing up a Yankee and Giant post-season series for the unemployed. That's an idea, and if they're going in for charity, how about a Pittsburgh and Detroit series for the benefit of Barney Dreyfuss and Frank Navin? After the attendance those guys have suffered this season they're entitled to pass the tambourine.

There's only one difficulty about a Yankee-Giants series. Jimmy Walker will have to throw out the first ball from some brewery in Monte Carlo.

BEAVER COUNTY TOURNEY SET

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The annual Beaver County tennis championships, sponsored as usual by the College Hill Tennis Club of Beaver Falls, will get under way a week from today on the six clay courts of Geneva College. Official word to the above effect was forthcoming late yesterday from Capt. Howdy Campbell, of the College Hill net squad. Campbell will serve on the committee in charge of the event, the veteran W. M. George having been happily selected as chairman and other members being J. Fred Ingram, F. Dale Campbell and William L. Potts.

Competition in men's singles and doubles will comprise the program, the man-to-man event having as major trophy for the victor a year's possession of the new Louis Ingram Cup, placed up for the first time in 1930 and captured then by Johnny Hecker, former Geneva stylist. There will also be permanent prizes for winners in both divisions of play, as well as an entirely novel feature, the award of a top-grade tennis racquet by lot to some contestant not fortunate enough to land one of the flagons.

The tourney will be reeled off all day Saturday and Labor Day, with final tussles billed for September 12. Entries will be received by Howard E. Campbell, in care of Keystone Driller Company, Beaver Falls, Pa.

The Beaver conclave, one of the oldest in the district, has been a yearly gathering, with few interruptions for nearly three decades. Among prior champions are Jack McLain, Jack Moore, S. Jarvis Adams, Jr., Browne Ranson, Dr. John O'Loughlin and Don Reader.

GIRL REPEATS SWIM WIN

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Battling water so rough that it forced the swimmers off their usual course into semi-protected area behind the breakwater, Margaret Ravior, sturdy Philadelphia mermaid, yesterday became the first swimmer ever to repeat a victory in the annual women's ten-mile marathon swim at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Miss Ravior, who won the event last year, outdistanced a starting field of 35 rivals, many of them veterans of previous swims, to take first prize money of $5,000. The crowd numbered close to 100,000 all through the race and doubled that figure as the competitors neared the finish. Miss Ravior finished nearly a half mile ahead of Mrs. Ethel Hertle Gary, of New York, winner of the 1928 marathon. Mrs. Gary was only a few minutes ahead of Ethel McGarry, of New York.

Miss Ravior ploughed along at about 55 strokes to the minute all through the race and did not increase her pace until she was within striking distance of the finish. Her official time was four hours, 56 minutes, 44 2-5 seconds.

The order of the finish, with times and awards for the leaders, follows:

1—Margaret Ravior, Philadelphia, time 4:56:44 2-5, $5,000.

2—Ethel Hertle Gary, New York, 5:08:20 9-10, $2,500.

3—Ethel McGarry, New York, 5:12:34 4-5, $1,000.

4—Leah Riley, Kranesburg, N. J., 5:16:39, $750.

5—Evelyn Armstrong, Detroit, $500.

6—Ruth Downing, Toronto, $250.

LOCALS IN CHICAGO

Yesterday four local golfers, J. W. Danforth, Ray I. Babcock, Sam Parks, Jr., and Fred Brand, Jr., set forth for the National amateur championship which opens at the Beverly Country Club, Chicago, Monday.

Tonight is the last night for qualifying in the West Penn Open, driving quarters at Saddle's, after the latter's [illegible] and Fox Chapel [illegible]. The finals are slated for Tuesday night. Men and women are competing.

Yesterday one of the interesting [illegible] tournaments of the season was played at the Wildwood Country Club.

Shooting a fine 89, Miss Antoinette Hunter, of Oakmont, former West Penn champion led the field of 239 contestants by four strokes. Her net score was 85. Miss Hunter was out in 42 and back home in 47, fine golf considering the condition of the course after the rain.

Mrs. D. A. Garber, of Stanton Heights, finished second with 93-8—85, and both Catherine Bird, of Montour Heights, and Mrs. Carl Van der Voort, of Shannopin, turned in gross 100s.

MRS. ASHFORD GETS 78

In the second division, Mrs. J. E. Ashford led with 105-29-78, with Mrs. B. A. Kerr finishing second with 100-20—80.

Mrs. Neiman, of Stanton Heights, topped the third flight with 119-40—97. Mrs. S. E. Donald, of South Hills, was second with 118-36—82. The scores of the leaders follow:

GUNN HAS 82 AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—The advance battalion of the army of 150 players who will march over the greens and fairways of the Beverly Country Club when the thirty-fifth United States Amateur golf tournament begins Monday satisfied itself today in sampling the course.

William Lawson Little, Jr., the modest San Franciscan who told Bobby Jones in 1929 that he would have eliminated him if Johnny Goodman hadn't, achieved the best practice round of the day yesterday, a 73, two over par.

George Voight, the New York star, who waited until he was almost 30 before grabbing at laurel leaves, produced the next best, a 74. Dr. O. F. Willing, of Portland, Ore., the dentist, took a casual 77, while Russ Martin, of Flossmoor, held himself to 78.

Other practice scores were posted yesterday by T. Philip Perkins, former British amateur champion, and one of the favorites for the title, 83; Ross Somerville, Canadian amateur champion, 81; Max Marston, national titleholder in 1923, 83; Watts Gunn, Bobby Jones' one time protege and runner-up to his tutor in the amateur in 1925, 82.

The tournament proceedings were made more interesting yesterday with the sudden entrance of Cyril Tolley, former British amateur champion.

RAIN PREVENTS NET DUELS

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Rain interrupted the National Doubles tennis championship play again yesterday and left the draw so disrupted that U. S. L. T. A. officials were forced to put the final over until Tuesday, when it will conflict with the International team matches with England and France at Philadelphia.

A heavy thunderstorm [illegible] drenched the already waterlogged courts that, even when the weather for a time in the afternoon, it was thought unwise to permit Johnny Doeg and George Lott, the defending champions, to play the remainder of their quarter-finals match with the U. S. Davis Cup singles stars, Sidney Wood and Frank X. Shields, of New York.

They will resume their best three out of five set play this afternoon and the winners will not be called upon to play again until Monday, when they will oppose Gregory Mangin, Newark, N. J., and Berkeley Bell, New York, in the upper half semi-final.

DORMONT WINS BY FORFEIT

An argument and forfeiture broke up the long awaited City League classic between Dormont and Books last evening at Dormont. Dormont was awarded the game by the forfeit score, 9 to 0, after Books refused to continue play.

The score stood at 2 to 2 in the first inning when the Books balked. Collins, Book catcher, was ordered from the game after a mixup at the plate and he refused to go. Umpire Jimmy Ahearn then awarded the game to Dormont. The teams are now tied for the second half lead, each with 14 games won and 5 lost.

Police were called to clear the field of spectators after the game had been forfeited.

In other loop frays last evening, Homewood defeated the Thomas nine, 6 to 3, and Bucks upset the Civics, 4 to 1.

In the West Penn League Reliance came to life after two successive setbacks and walloped Turtle Creek, 15 to 1. Linwood nosed out the Griffiths in the same league, 2 to 1.

In an independent tussle of note, the Iroquois team of the Greater Pittsburgh circuit, downed the crack Crawford Stars, 5 to 3.

Willows to Stage Big Carnival Today

The Willows swimming pool will be the scene of a gala water carnival and a beauty pageant this afternoon. The water program includes exhibitions, races and fancy diving events.

Following the swimming meet Miss Willows will be chosen. John Jay Burke, city office manager of the county parks, is in charge of the affair, assisted by W. W. McCafferty, Press Anderson and Ben Bright.

Buffalino Beaten In Amateur Show

Joey Chemis, of the Pittsburgh Lyceum, a 126-pounder, defeated Don Buffalino, of the Ambridge A. C., in the feature bout of the amateur ring show staged by the Bettis-Wright Club at Bettis Field last night.

In the other bouts, Johnny Bierk, of the Lyceum, defeated Mickey O'Brien, Braddock A. C., three rounds; Clem Blaha knocked out Al Nanci, Ambridge, in the last round and Johnny Trusky, Braddock A. C., was beaten by Johnny Hazel, Pittsburgh Lyceum, three rounds.

Haas Lost to A's For Season, Series

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—George (Mule) Haas, injured centerfielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, probably will be lost to the club for the rest of the season, including the World Series, Manager Connie Mack said yesterday. His wrist, broken several weeks ago, has failed to mend as well as hoped for.

The club trainer explained the trouble as difficulty with the knuckle bone of the left wrist. He said efforts of Haas to swing a bat resulted in the bone slipping out of place, causing pain and weakness.

WILMS DEFEATED

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Aug. 29.—F. H. Wilmsm, of Pittsburgh, extended James Knott, of New York in the thirty-seventh hole before bowing in defeat in the final round of the "old white" summer golf championship here yesterday.

WHEELING, W. Va., Aug. 29.—With the Press classic feature as the feature of the races today at the Wheeling Island fair course, and with some of the best runners at the course [illegible] to face the barrier in this event, [illegible] fans are assured of one of the best races on the [illegible] schedule.

Seven crack thoroughbreds will parade to the post in this event, listed as the fifth of the afternoon.

STAR HORSES ENTERED

Four of those entered in this race will be well backed. Jet, Autumn Bloom, Fayin, Noon Play and Participate, all of which have made excellent showings here in the first days of the meeting, will follow the lead pony to the starting line. Wild Olive, another great runner, which has not yet been raced here, is entered, and will no doubt be one of the favorites.

Post time today has been moved back until 3 o'clock, to accommodate the latecomers, and seven races are on the program.

In the feature race yesterday afternoon, the McClure Hotel claiming purse, Lawrence Dye rode his fourth winner of the meeting when he piloted Black Velvet, a 5-year-old daughter of Boniface-Viola Gill, home in a driving finish that saw the field sweep under the wire almost as one horse. Noses only separated the winner, Earfull, second place winner, and Sir Barely, the favorite, which was unable to do better than third, as they raced down the stretch in the mud.

WINNER OUTSIDER

The winner, a rank outsider in the betting, paid $15.40 on each $2 ticket, and covered the six and one-half furlongs in 1:27, excellent time for the condition of the track.

A crowd of over 5,000 fans braved the most atrocious weather conditions imaginable to witness the program of Friday, and attendance gained until the middle portion of the afternoon, despite a downpour of rain.

LOCAL POLOISTS SET FOR FRAY

LINCOLN FIELDS MUTUELS

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—(Special.)—The mutuels on the seven races at the Lincoln Fields track yesterday paid a total of $389.96.

OHIO SHOOTERS PLACE FIVE AT TOP

VANDALIA, O., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—A dark horse of clay target shooting galloped across the traps of the Amateur Trapshooting Association yesterday to win the Grand American Handicap, the most highly prized honor in the gun world.

The Rev. Garrison Roebuck, a United Brethren minister from McClure, O., [illegible] and late yesterday battled against great odds to force his way into a tie for first position with Fred Harlow, Newark, O., and R. F. Williamson, of Greenville, O., with scores of 96. Roebuck shot from the 16-yard line, Williamson from the 19 and Harlow from the 22.

WINS BY THREE

The handicap proved too much for Harlow, who won the Grand American in 1908 and he dropped five targets in the first event of the shoot-off to take third place. Williamson and Roebuck fought it out in the seventy-fifth target, the minister winning, 68 to 65.

Others who won fourth and fifth positions in a five-way shoot-off were Frank Foltz, also of McClure, O.; L. Craig, of Dallas, Tex.; Dr. R. D. Miller, of Matson, O.; Carl Barton, Springfield, Ill., and Dr. I. Finney, of Georgetown, Ill., all were deadlocked at 95 targets. Foltz broke 4 in the shootoff for fourth position, Craig 23 for fifth and Dr. Miller 22 for sixth.

Today was only the tenth time that the McClure hotelier had shot at clay targets. He was undecided until this shooting whether or not to enter the Grand American, which netted him better than $2,000 in cash and trophies.

MISS JAY LEADS

Miss Jeannette Jay Warner, Is winner of the South American women's championship earlier in the week, led the women's scores with a 92. Miss W. Ellis, of Ironia, N. J., was second with 91, and Miss Belle McCord Roberts, Long Beach, Cal., was third with 89.

Rufus Kerr, the 15-year-old Wichita Falls, Tex., boy who won the Grand American title last year, labored under a double handicap today, a broken right foot and a four-yard handicap which brought his score down to an 82, [illegible] out of the money.

G. L. Craig, shooting from the 17-yard mark, led the Pittsburgh contingent with a mark of 89. Miss A. S. Harrold, the only Pittsburgh woman entry, broke 84 targets from the 19-yard line. Pittsburgh scores follow:

Capt. J. L. Carney, 20 yards, 82; G. L. Craig, 17 yards, 89; Gabinus A. Gill, 18 yards, 78; Miss A. S. Harrold, 19 yards, 84; Ed Nadolny, 20 yards, 85; Otto Nadolny, 18 yards, 85; J. Painter, Jr., 16 yards, 87; Dr. E. R. Raymalley, 20 yards, 79.

MEINE READY FOR CARDS

Gelbert was careless at the middle bag as Adams filed to P. Waner. Paul slapped the ball to Thevenow, who insisted on a put-out of the home shortstop, but Umpire McGrew ruled the runner had toed the base and was safe. French then walked Wallie Roettger to fill the bases and Frisch came through with a double to score two runs.

BREAKS AGAINST FRENCH

French sustained two very bad breaks as he carried his two run lead into the eighth. Jim Bottomley drove a grounder toward Grantham to start the inning. George was in front of the ball when it took a bad hop and went over his head. The alert Tony Piet made a nea stop of the bad bounder and French ran to cover. Piet had the ball in Larry's glove in time for the play, but the pitcher could not hold it and Bottomley was on base.

Hafey then hit a slow roller to Traynor. Pie threw the ball in the dirt in front of Grantham, and the rocket rolled away, Paul Waner making no effort to recover it. Bottomley scored on the bad misplay, and Hafey carried the tying run to third. Pepper Martin singled over the important run in a hurry.

French fanned Wilson as Martin swiped the middle bag. L. Waner made a one-hand pickup of Gelbert's liner and was able to hold Martin at third. Flowers batted for Jim Lindsey, and French threw him out while holding the tying run at third. Up came little Sparky, and he did plenty. Adams pulled a double into the left center pocket, and the game was as good as over, as the two runs went in. Bill Hallahan worked the last inning against the Buccos.

French had Flint Rhem as his opponent through six rounds, the big righthander coming out for Ray Blades, who batted for him and drew an important base on balls in the inning. Ray was aboard when Frisch connected for his timely swat.

George Grantham and Lloyd Waner were batting stars. Grantham swatted a homer over the rightfield stands in the third.

SMITH BEATS HANNAH

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Harry Smith, New York middleweight stepped out of his class last night to win a 10-round decision over Jimmy Hannah, of Pocatello, Idaho, a lightweight, but the verdict met with considerable disapproval from 8,000 fans.

Don't Take a Man Seriously Because He's Interested

"Take it from Bob — he's peeved! Why? Because every time he steps some gal out more than twice she thinks he's "serious" and expects the wedding bells to peal.

Then if he tries to sidestep she sends papa around to ask his intentions!

"You can't be just friends!" he snorts. "Just as sure as you try it, they begin to Take You Seriously, and"—

We'll let him tell you the rest himself. This isn't a lovesick or "lonely heart" letter but just a young fellow's plea for a lady's viewpoint on a question that has him puzzled. He writes:

A GOOD SPORT

"I am 20, belong to a well-to-do family, and have never been called a poor sport. Being decidedly human, I like to take out girls of my own age, but I have no intention of marrying for a good while to come. I find these girls very interesting and would like to be just good friends with them. I like to talk to them and take them places.

"But the part that gets my goat is that, after going out with the same girl for a month or so, she invariably seems obsessed with the notion that I will ask her to marry me.

"Now, I always act the part of a gentleman. I don't 'kid them along' or tell them a lot of stuff I don't mean. Yet, in one or two cases, the girls' fathers have gone so far as to ask my intentions'—and when I replied that they were purely platonic, they seemed hurt.

"I am in a quandary about what to do. Should I go around with younger girls? Or should I cut out girls altogether until I am 'grown up,' or what? Should I try going out with a different one each week? Do you think that would work?

"No doubt you think I sound like a conceited young puppy, but honestly I'm not. I'm just puzzled.

YOUTH PUZZLED

"Why should these girls begin to 'take me seriously' the minute I act like they interested me? I'm not the only fellow they do that with, either, so don't think I am throwing bouquets at myself.

"Why can't a girl understand that a fellow may just like her company, and want to be just a friend? It seems now that nine out of ten girls think they have strings on you or something and spoil it all. Why are they like that? They make me tired!

"BOB."

Well, son, why are they like that? I suspect it's because they want to have strings on you, and believe that you're serious. For while theoretically, gents are supposed to be the pursuers and the femmes the pursued, actually the little girls are, most of them, out to get their man, and when he sticks around pretty regular they naturally think they've got him.

WRONG IMPRESSION

So if you've been picking one of 'em to "beau around," and neglecting the rest, you've probably given her the impression that you were her "steady."

Why not go in for a little more variety?

Why not stop going in so strong for one at a time, and give all of 'em a whirl? You can be good friends with all of them then... and you'll have plenty of chance to size them all up and to know the One Girl when you find her.

'IN CASE YOU DON'T KNOW' -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

In case you, Jill or Gloriette, don't know who this "Empress Eugenie" is, whose dear little hat that lends such womanly grace and elegance to both 16 and 16 is back again . . Perhaps, I think very much perhaps, you have forgotten your French history . . . Perhaps, also very much perhaps, you never knew it . . . And Empress Eugenie as a woman, is a brand new person to you.

Do you not think that to know something of her when you trot into a hat-shop and say, "I want one of those, there, now. Empress Eugenie (pronounce it Euzhanie) hats" that it might give an aura of romance to your little hat when you know some of these things about her?

She lived to be 94 years old, and died only in 1920 . . She lived 57 years longer than her husband, Napoleon the third, and 59 years longer than her only son . . . She was a Spanish countess, daughter of a Spanish nobleman father and a Scotch mother named Kirkpatrick . . . The grace and fire of the Spaniard and the hardiness, virtue and fascinating historical heritage of the Scotch made a beautiful and clever woman.

Next to the word "beauty" describing her is always set the word "extravagance" . . . She set out for the opening of the Suez Canal with two hundred and fifty dresses—it is true—but she lived at an excessively elegant court, she was to be gone for several months, and she herself had been heard to call her dresses, heavy with ribbon and lace and moire, "my political dresses" . . . Her taste was perfect; she disliked outrageous styles in color and line.

Remember that she lived in a time when these things were fashionable . . . Dresses so wide that it was difficult to play with one's children and take your husband's arm, when two thousand women were burnt to death at a church festival because a bit of drapery caught fire and spread joyfully to the two thousand frail, ruffled dresses they wore, when a frock could and did have 25 ruffles, each with two rows of velvet ribbon sewn thereon by hand; when six petticoats were nothing at all (listen, first a flannel one, then another padded with horse-hair, then an Indian-calico one, then a white petticoat with three stiffly-starched ruffles, two muslin petticoats, then the dress, all upon a pair of lace pantalets!") and when for a time real gems were used for buttons! . . . My dears.

I have made you her picture from an old photograph, and some of the nose-tipping hats that were worn during her time of youth and beauty.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Shortness of Breath May Indicate Trouble

Difficulty in breathing, particularly after any exertion, is a symptom of importance. Early attention to this disorder will prevent later distress.

Dr. Copeland

Within the past few years after walking or climbing stairs have you noticed a shortness of breath? If you have observed it and have not been to a physician lately go and have a careful physical examination.

Shortness of breath and difficulty in breathing following slight exertion may indicate some change in the muscle of the heart. Of course I do not mean that one who has played a strenuous game of tennis or baseball should not be short of breath. Shortness of breath after strenuous exercise is normal. However if you have noticed that in climbing up a flight or two of stairs you must stop and catch your breath, that is a different story.

Sometimes people notice that their feet swell and that they have difficulty in taking off their shoes at night. Swelling of the feet and shortness of breath are two danger signals that the body is giving you. You should heed these warnings and seek the necessary relief and care.

There are other persons who have difficulty in making themselves comfortable while lying in bed. In order to sleep they must have a pillow and be propped up in a semi-up-right position. This condition is spoken of as "orthopnoea," meaning difficulty in breathing while in a recumbent position. This symptom is far more likely to indicate changes in the heart than ordinary shortness of breath, which is spoken of as "dyspnoea."

Those who have dyspnoea and orthopnoea are liable to tire very quickly. If they hurry in their work they soon become extremely fatigued.

I do not mean to say that all persons with these signs have heart disease and that their days are numbered. As a matter of fact, they usually outlive their neighbors. Once they are aware of their defects, they adjust themselves and by leading sane and sensible lives may become centenarians.

The Cardiac Clinic

By DOROTHY ROE

They give the same old reasons
When marriages don't click.
The truth might sound too trivial—
You couldn't make it stick.

Imagine walking up to a judge and saying, "Your honor, I want a divorce because my husband won't wear dinner clothes in the summer time."

Or—"We can't go any longer—he always orders two desserts."

Yet, it's little things like that that wreck big marriages.

A woman's habit of leaving her golden hair in the comb has caused marital rifts that have hidden behind such resounding legal terms as "mental cruelty" and "incompatibility."

The law is resourceful in finding impressive names for unimpressive truths.

If Jack Spratt and his wife had lived in these Reno-bound days their differences over the fat would have netted some lawyer a comfortable fee.

And then, since we're going Mother Goose, there was Peter, the pumpkin-eater, who had a wife and couldn't keep her. Peter didn't know about divorce laws and such—so he put his wife in a pumpkin shell, and there he kept her very well.

Such simple but effective measures might prove a solution to our complicated modern marital problems.

All the talk about psychoanalysis and astrological compatibility has made us all a little goofy.

Nowadays a husband must have been born under the right star or the whole thing's off.

And if he is suspected of having that abhorrent thing known as an inferiority complex, he's as good as sunk.

Heaven help the man whose wife suddenly discovers that her Freudian dreams dictate a change of mates.

Then there are those bridge table divorces.

What with the Culbertsons and Lenzes and the Works all at each others' throats over the correct system of bidding in contract, it's a wise wife who knows enough to agree with her husband.

All over our land there are hitherto happily married couples who are developing slow, cold hatred for each other over the momentous question of what is a demand bid.

So acute is the attack of contract-itus that a woman who has agreed to give up career, family and friends for her husband will battle to the last ditch over her right to an original bid of two clubs.

Ruth Snyder killed her husband because she found a man she liked better. But many a wife has contemplated getting out the sashweight when her husband failed to return her opening lead.

When they appear before the judge they call it "cruel and inhuman treatment"—but the real reason may be nothing more impressive than a husband's bid of hearts when his wife signaled diamonds.

When Does a Child Learn?

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

"Well," the mother sighed in evident relief, "vacation is nearly over, thank Heaven. John has done nothing but play and waste his time all summer. I'll be glad when he gets back in school and begins to learn things."

"It's true, John has played all summer, but the mother errs when she thinks he hasn't learned things. But (at least to my humble mind) she starts on a false premise when discussing or thinking of education. To her, the child who can rattle off multiplication tables or immediately tell you where Tasmania is, is EDUCATED. To her, education is a RESULT. To me, it is a never-ending process.

The man who can rattle off statistics, who always knows the answer, is not necessarily well educated. He's a parrot and and anyone can be a parrot, but who, after all, WANTS to be one? We differ from the lower animals in being able to reason, to see the MEANING of things and only as we combine facts with their meanings are we still in the glorious process of becoming educated.

It is true, John hasn't done any adding or dividing or spotting of a certain island with his grimy forefinger all summer long. But he has learned things nevertheless. John has learned that bluff doesn't always constitute a firm foundation for even local supremacy. A new boy came to the community, and, tiring of John's bullying, licked him soundly. John was thoughtful for quite a few days after the fight. John made a glider in a hurry and suffered a complete crack-up in the back lot. And it's valuable education to know that success is spelled in tiny letters of taking pains! John learned that one must be sure of a river's depth before diving, having gone into mud up to his neck just to be the first lad off the diving board. Yet his mother says he's learned nothing this summer.

I think he's learned a lot. Not printed facts, of course, but most of life isn't printed—it's met on the street, in our living rooms, at the corner drugstore, on the baseball diamond, and there are facts we MUST know about life which we can't get from books, but from experience.

When do children learn? That sounds silly, but it has been asked me. Why, good grief—they learn every second of their lives, just as you and I do. One can't turn a child's mind on and off like a faucet. Therefore, it pays to be sure the child is learning something constructive through your own conduct and judgments every moment. And it is wise to consider the fact that the things he learns from life are equally important, if indeed, not more so, than the facts he gleans from books.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Strain on the Budget

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When one receives an invitation to a wedding shower and gives the bride-to-be a gift, then receives an invitation to the wedding, is it necessary to give another gift at this time, or was the first sufficient for both occasions? MARIE.

Woe is me, I'm afraid that our shower gifts count only as shower gifts, and no matter how many showers there are, if we accept the invitations we are expected to give a shower present for every shower that we attend. And even if the showers and the shower gifts "pour," we still are expected to give a wedding gift, if we are invited to the wedding. And, what with this and your with not this business of giving shower-presents is certainly a strain on the well-known budget. As who of us doesn't know? If our budgets can't stand this strain, all we can do is not to accept the shower invitations.

A "Big Little Thing"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a young man (a co-worker) to pay a girl's fare when he meets her going to work or coming home? This occurs at the average of four times a week. T. P.

No, a girl is short-sighted to allow this to commence. For, obviously, it is much easier for her to begin by being straightforward about her wish to pay her own fare. It is perfectly easy for her to do this, and she shouldn't feel, or have in her manner, any embarrassment about it. The co-worker will respect her quick social judgment, and the traveling together will be unclouded by the necessity for going through the fare-paying motions every time. It's always better to keep this sort of thing definitely understood, for although it seems a small detail, it often, too often, can become one of those big little things.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Is Worried by Katherine's Reaction to Husband's Letter

I found Katherine breakfasting from a tray laid upon a table on the little upper veranda. Beside her, in her carriage, pink and white and altogether adorable, lay the little new princess of our home. Beyond the closed door I could hear the voices of my young son and his cousin, as they scrambled through their dressing for breakfast.

"Lo, darling!" Katherine's voice had a lilt in it, and her eyes were starry. I realized, suddenly, that I had heard that lilt, seen that light in her eyes, ever since the coming of my small daughter. I reflected that not once since Katherine had taken into her care this wee wonder of wonders which had come to me, had I heard in her voice the despairing note which had been there when on the last Christmas Eve, she had gone to bed, rather than torture herself with the sight of the Christmas celebration of a happy home.

There could be only one explanation for this. The thwarted motherhood, which was her tragedy was finding solace and outlet in her care and love for my baby. I ought to have been genuinely happy for her. I was. I told myself fiercely, but I could not disguise the fact that, mingled with my altruism, was a feeling so vague and I could not give a name to it but which I knew, instinctively, was unworthy of me.

I hurried into speech, that I no longer might face that shadowy something in my own soul which, I felt, must be met and routed sooner or later.

"I'm the postman," I said with forced gayety, laying her two letters, address down, beside her plate. Then I turned abruptly to the carriage where my wee daughter lay with wide-open eyes regarding—what? I made the foolish observation common to all mothers.

"She's looking at me, Katherine! I believe she knows me!"

I expected the gentle raillery with which she had replied to similar declarations on my part since our homecoming, but she made no answer. Then on my young daughter's face there appeared a most beatific smile, and defiantly I proclaimed another foundationless banality.

"I tell you she's smiling at me, and you needn't tell me it's a colic pain either. She isn't drawing up her feet at all. Come and look at her!"

"Sorry!—I didn't hear—Madge!"—the word was a cry—"will you stay with the baby a few minutes?—and may I go into your room?"

"Of course," I said hastily, "and—don't hurry! I'll see to the boys, and everything."

"Thank you!" She hurried away, and as I stepped to the table to clear her tray away, and set it in the hall for Katie to take down, I saw that the letter from Hal Meredith, now turned superscription upward, lay unopened beside her plate. It was the other letter, the one from South America, though not in Jack's handwriting, which had sent her, white-lipped and trembling, into my room.

My own hands were not wholly free from tremors as I laid Hal Meredith's letter at the back of the table. What could have been the contents of that letter? Katherine is the most controlled woman I know; for to her own unusual natural poise she has added her years of professional training. I knew that only something horrible to her could have caused her to rush away so hurriedly.

Could it be that Jack was dead! My pulse seemed to stop, then raced again as I realized that a normal woman's reaction to news of death or terrible illness would not have been the one she had displayed. I was Jack's kinswoman and her nearest friend—she would have turned to me with the news, have clung instinctively to me in our common sorrow.

No, it was something else—something perhaps worse than death—to her—which had sent her to cover like a wounded animal. All I could do, though I longed to go to her was to stand aside, protect her solitude, and attend to the duties which she had left behind her.

The door behind me opened quietly and Junior and Roderick came tip-toeing out. I smiled to myself as I contrasted their entrance with the noisy demonstration of their first day at home. Then Mother Graham had shown Junior what was meant by the old phrase "having your nose out of joint" when she had reproved him so sharply for waking the baby, and worse—from the little boy's standpoint—had ignored him while she tried to hush his baby sister. I had neither interfered with my mother-in-law's dictum at the time, nor tried to soothe my son's wounded feelings later. But at my first opportunity I had shown him that I did not blame him for his first offense, but had told both him and Roderick how necessary it was that little babies should have their full quota of sleep and not be rudely awakened. I knew that Katherine was wisely insisting that the routine of the house go on as usual so that the baby could be trained to sleep through it.

"You needn't tiptoe, boys," I told them, smiling, "although I'm glad to see you so careful. But she's wide awake. Come and look at baby!"

"Baby!" Junior echoed, not rudely, but with distinct disdain in his voice. "Is that all the name she's ever going to have?"

Household Hints -:-

A wonderful cleaning paste for copper pans may be made by mixing together a small teacupful of flour, one of salt and two of fine silversand. Moisten with cold water and add about four teaspoonful of vinegar. Put a little on a cloth and rub the utensil with it. Rinse in cold water and dry thoroughly with another clean cloth.

The wise housewife takes a census of the jellies, preserves and pickles that are used during the winter months. Then she knows what quantity will be required for the following season, just what was the most popular and any that did not take so well, and she does not have a lot of things left over at the end of the winter months.

A bundle of straws, such as are used at soda fountains, are convenient and sanitary to feed liquids to a sick child. They can be burned after using and there is no danger of breakage as with glass tubes. Children will oftimes take nourishment through a fascinating straw when otherwise it would mean a difficult task.

Today's Tid Bit:

Microphones are tested before every broadcast at local studios. The operator says "Woof, woof" into the microphone, and if he has nothing to do with a mad dog. It's a the best word for testing purposes because it goes along evenly until the end of the word, when the "peak" comes . . .

THE LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Radio City is now crashing the rotogravures. Not as it looks at present, but as it will appear when the last nail is hammered and the last piece of greenery put in place. If the real thing looks as good as the advance pictures, New Yorkers in general, radio folk in particular, can point with pride.

The broadcasters are finally bringing the baritone of Paul Robeson to the armchairs. One of the richest of all baritones is Robeson's. No first ass singer is now outside the radio corral. In signing vocalists the microphone monarchs have done their most enterprising work next to making Europe as accessible as a big town dance band.

Not so long ago the monarchs were having difficulty getting London. They now switch from London to Vienna as easily as they switch from New York to Chicago.

Foreign radio conquests have become commonplace. Rarely are they important news today. Only the announcement of a talk from Stalin would make Page One today. Wonder if listeners are not getting fed up with European statesmen. Wonder if they wouldn't enjoy for a change the music hall entertainers of London, Paris and Berlin?

Even fishing is coming into the radio net. The broadcasters will have their trouble making it exciting to the eardrums. Not even Floyd Gibbons could get a punch into a cry that John W. Angler has just landed a six pound porgy."

With notable sports events few and far between program poohbahs are thanking their stars that the supremacy between Twenty Grand and Mate is still undetermined. While N. B. C. is represented on the turf by Clem McCarthy, Columbia can now point to expert Bryan Field.

ODOR OF SUGAR BRINGS RAID

The keen sense of smell of prohibition agents by which they detected odors of corn sugar, was responsible, according to testimony before the United States commissioner, in Mike Spatio and Thomas Scro, of Imperial, being held for court on a charge of having material designed for manufacture of moonshine whisky.

The agents testified they saw corn sugar and part of a still being loaded on a truck from a garage in the rear of Spatio's residence, their attention having been attracted to the loading of the truck by the odor of the sugar.

Four stills were confiscated by prohibition agents in five raids yesterday. They were reported found in the homes of Steve Borushko, at 347 Beech street, East Pittsburgh; Mary Hosch, at 162 Fifth street, Rankin; Vincent Spagnolo, at 167 Freeport road, Blawnox, and Helen Moszumann, at 525 Duquesne street, Rankin.

Seizure of home brew and moonshine at 1720 Fifth avenue resulted in the arrests of J. W. Shiveman and Harry Simmons, agents said.

Fanchon Succeeds in Subduing Collin's Antagonism

CHAPTER XV

"I have nothing to say in my defense," Fanchon went on, "except that it is possible that appearances were against me. Possible that I did not really know of Commander ——" she hesitated again, remembered and went on, "Commander Gaines' marriage, after all; possible that my interest in the native you speak of was what I said it to be."

She was silent a moment, remembering all she knew of native life and character and of the misunderstandings which had before this arisen between the children of the Island sons and alien occupiers of the Islands. "I am not pleading for myself," she continued, "only for, as you put it, the benefit of the doubt."

"You mentioned," she said, smiling suddenly, Hawaiian moons and susceptible youth. You forgot to mention loneliness. A girl alone. Is it likely that when offer of haven and harbor and affection were held out to that girl that she should refuse——" Or that she should, as she would think, seek to jeopardize herself by a confession of what, at its worst, was only folly?"

After a moment fascinated against his will by her smile by the warmth in her eyes and her voice Collin nodded.

"You have me there. Almost—you have convinced me. Let it go then, as folly. I understand folly. What man does not, grown to man's estate? But what alienated me was your attitude——"

FANCHON EXPLAINS

She said swiftly.

"You know nothing of my attitude. Only from my letters. Letters are dangerous, they mislead. I have never been," she laughed a little, "a ready letter writer. I am sorry. I would like you to know that I care for your mother—very much. I never knew mine," she added, unconscious of where her words were leading her.

"What!" asked Collin in blank amazement.

Fanchon flushed scarlet. She said hurriedly:

"I mean—it has been some years since she died. Before that I was a child, busy with the adjustments of childhood of growing up. I never came close to her. Only since her death, and that of my father, have I felt the need of her. Of someone to whom I belonged. I am putting this very badly," she said hopelessly.

He was suddenly gentle with her.

"No, I think I understand."

Fanchon rose to her feet.

"I must," she said, "get back to the house and dress for dinner, Mr. Carstairs—"

"Collin, please. We may be enemies, but we are cousins," he said, rising.

"I am not your enemy," she said, so sweetly, so simply that his heart misgave him and he took a step toward her, "even if you are mine, Collin, if you like. I will talk to your mother about—what has happened."

"That is generous of you. No, if she has not spoken of it herself, perhaps she would rather not. Perhaps she wants you to begin all over again," Collin said, a little awkwardly."

COLLIN ADVISES

Fanchon remembered certain words of Jennie Carstairs, words actually urging her to begin all over, making a clean sweep of the years which lay behind. Now she knew what they had meant. Then, she had not known.

"I am perfectly willing," she argued. "Circumstantial evidence is a hard thing to fight against. Youth—and what we have called folly—and rumors and appearances of evil do not make it any easier." She looked him straight in the eyes. "I have done nothing of which I am ashamed," she said, honestly, in the person of Evelyn Howard and in the person of Fanchon Meredith as well. For Fanchon, too, was young and Fanchon had loaned herself to folly and Fanchon had met with the consequences of evil appearances and circumstantial evidence.

"I believe you," he said slowly, "whether it is because you are so darned beautiful or not, I don't know; I do know that you are not at all like your letters. Your letters seemed—insincere. You do not. Yes, I believe you. Shall we call it—armistice?"

"Armed truce?" she laughed and laid her slender, golden hand in his.

Jennie Carstairs, coming softly through the garden, saw them standing there and her face lighted. She came forward with a soft exclamation of pleasure.

AN INSPIRATION

"Collin, my darling! and Evelyn! You've met then. I'm so glad!"

"So am I—" said Collin. His arm went about his mother, he bent his tall, dark head to kiss her cheek. But his hand still held Fanchon fast.

Fanchon had an inspiration. She said, not trying to free herself.

Aunt Jennie. I told Collin just now I wouldn't speak of something to you. But I'd rather I have talked to him about it. I have explained my reasons for not speaking, or at least——" she looked at him briefly, "he has explained them for me. I—I'd like you to know that all I have told him he believes. That there isn't anything I should tell you, not really. Nothing that matters. Nothing that would hurt you."

"My dear," said Jennie Carstairs.

Together, hands fast, the three went back toward the house.

POPULAR GIRL

That was the beginning of Fanchon's happy summer. Collin, cancelling whatever other plans he may have had, was at 'dunerose' all season save for those occasions on which he went to town on business. He taught Fanchon to ride and to golf. She was already able to swim and her prowess in the surf amazed him.

But the bit of ocean which surrounded Southampton was child's play to Fanchon after her years on Hawaiian beaches, riding the great breakers to shore. He improved her tennis game and took her to dinners and dances. They were always together, to the entertainment of the colony and to the discomfort of a great many marriageable maidens whose eyes and hearts were set upon the conquest of Collin.

Nor did Fanchon lack for attendance. She had more young men about her doorstep than she knew what to do with. She had everything in her favor. She was young, she was beautiful, she was intelligent, she was a good sport and she was backed by the Carstairs millions and the unassailable Carstairs social position.

Synopsis

Young and beautiful Fanchon Meredith leaves San Francisco by airplane to escape arrest in connection with a murder in which her sweetheart, Tony, is implicated. She had not known that he was a gunman. Evelyn Howard, whom Fanchon had met on a voyage from Hawaii, is aboard. She is en route to New York to live with her wealthy aunt, Mrs. Allison Carstairs, whom she has never seen. The plane crashes and all but Fanchon are killed. Grasping the opportunity to start life anew, Fanchon goes to the Carstairs home as Evelyn. Mrs. Carstairs' affection wins her heart. At Southampton, awaiting the arrival of her son, Collin, Mrs. Carstairs warns Fanchon not to take him seriously. He arrives and accuses Fanchon of being there under false pretenses. Collin objects to "Evelyn." Fanchon learns that Evelyn had indiscreet affairs with a naval officer and a native.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Jettisoned!

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Nickname Causes Egotistical Banker to Leave Town

When I came on from the coast where, for 12 years, I had been making absurd mistakes in the picture producing game, and making money at the same time, I closed my deal of selling out to a big picture combination and then grabbed a train for East Haldon.

Effie lived at East Haldon and Effie and I were all who were left of the family, Effie being my sister.

Effie was Mrs. Larry Garson and, according to all of her letters to me, she was mighty well pleased at being Mrs. Larry Garson.

At the time I left for the coast Effie had a good paying position in the office of a big dairy concern and she was going around with Harold Malvern. Harold was a new-comer to East Haldon. He had come from the city as teller in the brand new First National Bank of East Haldon, and he was certainly an eyeful for the girls, being mighty good looking, a heavy six-footer and with a line of conversation that seemed to be a winner.

It looked to me as though Effie would land him for keeps and be mighty well fixed, for Harold Malvern had all the earmarks of being a rich man, well on the way to the millionaire class, to hear him talk.

As for Larry Garson, I only knew him slightly. He worked for his father, who has a sort of bottling works in his old barn. He manufactured soft drinks only, and Larry drove around and peddled the stuff. Larry had sort of grown up with Effie and was just one of the town boys; but, being some five years younger than myself, I had never paid much attention to him in my younger days.

RECEIVES LETTER

I had been on the Coast about a year and had put all of my financial eggs into one basket. I sure had to watch that basket. And then I got a letter from Effie explaining that she was going to become Mrs. Larry Garson and wouldn't I please come back East and give her away, seeing that I was the only person qualified to do that.

Well, I certainly did feel badly about it—not about Effie getting married. I wanted her to marry when she found Mr. Right Man, because I believe in marriage—for everyone except myself. I've seen too much matrimony, so-called, out in Hollywood to be sap enough to try it myself. But at any rate, what I mean is, I felt mighty sorry that I couldn't come on.

I wrote to Effie and explained that all the money I had in the world, which wasn't much, was tied up in my first solo venture in producing, and that I couldn't leave or all the money I had in the world I could put into a dime bank.

I remember that I wrote, "Larry Garson, is it? I thought it was to be Harold Malvern? Why marry Larry?"

Effie wrote back a nice letter. She understood why I couldn't come East and hoped I'd save my money and then put it into some business that was safe and sane, like ginger ale.

SUCCESSFUL FILM

I couldn't understand why she wrote that, unless it was some joke. When it came to my query about marrying Larry, she wrote:

"I am marrying Larry because I love him."

Well, that was that, a woman's reason. She need not have added the "I love him," she could have stopped at "because," for I know that's sufficient for a woman's reason.

My picture came through on a lucky break and I sold it at once at about 500 per cent profit, so I sent Effie a check for a thousand dollars for her wedding present and wired her. She was married the same day I sold my first picture and got hold of my first piece of real money.

After that I kept plugging along and making a few big hits and intending to come East, but never quite doing it.

It wasn't quite two years later that I got a wire from Larry. The wire was:

"It's a boy. Effie fine. The wedding present you sent is already in the bank drawing interest for his college tuition."

That made me feel pretty swell so I sent another present.

And here it was, almost twelve years later, and I hadn't seen Effie in all the time, nor my brother-in-law since he was a kid driving his father's ginger ale wagon, and I'd never seen Gerald. Gerald was Effie's boy Gerald. Gerald was Effie's boy, my nephew, and as my name was Gerald, I was rather proud.

So, as I say, I sold my concern, put the money in trust and, knowing that I could play around for the rest of my days, I grabbed a train for East Haldon and was driven out to 1328 Maple boulevard, which was a new one on me as there had been no Maple boulevard in East Haldon when I went away.

It was the old North Main street I saw, but now a street of swell residences. On the way out I passed a long six-story white tile building with a block-long sign:

GARSON'S GINGER ALE

The taxi man turned up a wide white pebbled drive to a sort of castle. I thought he was wrong, but he wasn't. That was Effie's little home "shack." It was a swell place.

I had been there nearly a week and was getting ready to take the kid on a trip to Europe with me, and he was reading a lot of stuff about Europe. I remember we were on the big wide veranda and Jerry looked up and said to his mother, "Mother, what does 'jettisoned' mean?"

To my surprise Effie begins to laugh. And then Larry begins to laugh.

"What's funny about it, Pop?" Jerry demanded.

"Nothing, Gerald; it just reminded us of something," and then she explained that to jettison anything was to throw it overboard from a ship when the ship was in distress, such as a cargo that weighed down a sinking ship.

Effie and Larry continued to eye each other and grin and, after the kid had finished his story and left, I wanted to know what was so darn funny about the word "jettisoned."

LARRY WAS AFRAID

"Tell him, Larry dear," Effie said.

Larry had his Jap boy bring out some ingredients and he mixed up something that demanded a portion of Garson's Ginger Ale. He sat there sampling the delicious, though illegal, concoction, and Larry tried to explain.

"Remember Harold Malvern, Jerry?"

"Sure, a big wealthy swell, came here with the new bank. I thought he was going to rush Effie right up to the altar."

"I was afraid he might," Larry confessed. "You see, I never let on, because in those days we were mighty poor folks, but I sure was madly in love with Effie and had always been since we were kids. Well, this big Harold came with his costly car, his swell clothes, his important bank job and a line of talk that would make old Jawn D. cough up 50 cents instead of a dime. And soon after this I'm darned if old prohibition didn't surprise my dad. My dad lived long enough to know the feel of big money, but prohibition nearly broke his heart at first. He said it would kill the sale of ginger ale, as it was taking away the stuff ginger ale was meant to twin up with. Poor guess—it did just the opposite. People had to have ginger ale to cover up the shudders in prohibition hooch, and our business began to grow.

"By that time," Larry went on, "this Harold had got a head start on me with Effie. I was able to buy good clothes and join the golf and canoe club and drive a car, still it seemed to me that Effie could see only this big Harold.

"He used to talk big over at the canoe club, especially about his yacht that he said was moored off Gloucester, and about shooting great rapids in Canada in canoes and about sailing catboats around Bermuda. I guess, according to him, there wasn't any sort of a craft from a kid's raft to the Leviathan that he didn't know all about.

"I bought a handsome canoe and outfit and joined the club. I was afraid to make much of a play for her because Big Harold was still hanging around Effie, was always taking possession of her. Well, sir, I got her to go in my canoe one day and then another day and we got nice and friendly. Harold didn't seem to like it. He came over from the bank one afternoon with a swell hamper. He saw us getting ready to go out in the canoe, for Effie was still working in the dairy office and couldn't get away earlier.

"How about taking me along, got plenty of eats, and things for all of us," he said, and without waiting for me to say yes, or for Effie, he put the hamper in the canoe and started to step in. He almost stepped on the gunwale of the canoe. His two hundred pounds of beef and two hundred tons of hot air would have put her under. I saw that he didn't know a thing about a canoe. I made him step in the middle and got him seated. I fixed Effie up comfortably, handed Harold a paddle and we started out. After he had caught plenty of crabs with the paddle and spattered Effie, I took the paddle away from him, turned back to the landing, parked him in the middle for ballast and Effie and I, at each end, paddled. We got out of the river into the lake and a stiff breeze was kicking up some white caps.

NAMED 'JETTY'

"And he turned green!" Effie howled.

"Listen, I thought you invented all sorts of ships and taught old Noah how to navigate," I said. He begged me to get him ashore. I winked at Effie. 'We'd smash to bits going ashore, I've got to jettison my cargo,' I said. 'Do anything,' he said, not knowing what 'jettison' meant, so I got a quick hold on him and heaved him overboard. 'I can't swim,' he yelled, grabbing for the canoe. I paddled away and said, 'Stand up, you fathead, you're in three feet of water,' and then Effie and I paddled over to Lone Island and enjoyed Harold's hamper of swell eats and I asked her to marry me and here we are!"

"That," said Effie, "was why we just screamed when Jerry asked me what 'jettisoned' meant."

"And," said Larry, "Harold left town about six months later, because everyone persisted in calling him 'Jetty'."

A Laggard Prosecutor

District Attorney Park Seems Indifferent to Some Serious Charges—Brief Comment on Local News.

If someone else will amass the evidence, swear out the warrants and round up the witnesses, there is a possibility that District Attorney Park may show some interest in the cases of politicians and public officials accused of criminal misconduct. But there is scant likelihood that he will act of his own initiative in such cases.

*The conclusion that the public prosecutor is in-*different to accusations of malfeasance is forced by the attitude he has taken towards some very serious ones made during the campaign. There are the charges, for instance, made by K. William Schuchman against the poor directors, Maj. J. Clyde Miller, H. H. Dixon and W. L. Henderson.

Among other things the poor directors are accused of having bought for the county with the taxpayers' money a tract of land that had been sold only two days before for $25,000 less than they gave for it. The charge is supported by public records and is not denied. An alert prosecutor would instantly have seen the need for an investigation. Park has required urging.

The charges made in connection with the County Airport scandal are also of a character warranting a grand jury inquiry. The County Commissioners are said to have ignored low bids for the grading contract and to have favored a high bidder who immediately sub-let the contract for the amount of the low bid. District Attorney Park has done nothing about it.

District Attorney Park owes it to the public to say something about these matters. He also owes it to the public to explain his association with the notorious Volpe brothers of Wilmerding. Park and other candidates were at a meeting last Sunday at which John Volpe presided and in which James Volpe participated. Some of the candidates were entertained after the meeting at John Volpe's home.

John Volpe has had an interesting career. He was tried for murder in 1919 and acquitted. He was convicted of aggravated assault and battery in 1929, but won a new trial, and was acquitted. He was tried with others in 1927 for the killing of Constable Harry F. Davenport, but the jury disagreed. Park said then he ought to have been convicted.

John Volpe and his four brothers pleaded guilty in 1927 in Federal Court to violating the prohibition law, and John to maintaining a common nuisance as well. James Volpe had just finished at the time a 15 month sentence at Atlanta for bootlegging. James was quizzed last year in connection with the racket murder of a woman and three men in Braddock by bootleg gunmen. He admitted having loaned several thousand dollars to one of the slain men. This is one of Allegheny County's numerous unsolved murder mysteries.

It is scarcely complimentary to District Attorney Park that these notorious racketeers should be supporting his candidacy, and still less complimentary that Park should associate with them at a Sunday meeting. Ralph H. Smith, Independent Republican candidate for District Attorney, did not violate the proprieties in the least in calling attention to this matter—he did a public service.

*Scant sympathy will go out from the general pub-*lic to the nine persons convicted in Washington yesterday in connection with the attack made by the National Miners Union on the meeting of the United Mine Workers at Canonsburg last month. The National Miners Union alienated public sympathy by interfering with the exercises of the right of free speech by others after having begged for it for its own members.

The death of former Police Magistrate James J. Kirby removes from Pittsburgh a vigorous and forceful character whose name was at one time often in the newspapers. Judge Kirby served on the Police Court bench for 14 years under three Mayors. Old Police Court reporters will remember him pleasantly for his many fine qualities and also as a prolific source of news.

Old residents of the downtown section, who are holding a reunion at Kennywood Park today, are being asked to sign a register, which will be preserved for its historical value. This suggests that the time is anticipated, if not already arrived, when to have been born downtown, or to be the son or daughter of someone born downtown, will be an honor and carry with it social prestige.

Notwithstanding that times are far from as good as one would like them to be, it is not to be overlooked that business is proceeding and that from time to time large contracts are let which will give numerous men work. Of such a character is the contract for 276,000 tie plates just awarded to the Carnegie Steel Company by the Cincinnati Union Terminal Company.

*The Gravure Section of tomorrow's Sun-Tele-*graph should not be overlooked by lovers of beautiful and interesting pictures. We specially commend to their attention the marine landscape "Favoring Winds," by Patrick Dunbar, reproduced in colors. The prize-winning pictures in the amateur photograph contest will also be found well worth while.

The American Weekly magazine section of the Sunday Sun Telegraph will be found tomorrow up to its usual high standard. It is a complete magazine with fiction, pictures and articles on science and discovery. In the news section Mark Shields' review of local politics will be one of the most important features.

*The Sun-Telegraph salutes the veterans of Ameri-*can wars who are holding their twelfth annual reunion in Kennywood Park today under the auspices of this newspaper. The Nation owes a heavy debt of gratitude to these men, and the Sun-Telegraph considers it a valued privilege to be allowed every year to contribute to their entertainment.

The suggestion made by this newspaper several weeks ago that the government authorities be requested to send the new dirigible Akron over Pittsburgh in one of its trial flights seems to have fallen on receptive ears. There is now a good chance, according to Washington reports, that we shall see the great airship. It will be well worth going some distance to see.

Traffic Rules for Marriage

In love, as in motoring, a woman is always disobeying traffic rules—and then wondering how the "smash-up" occurred.

* * *

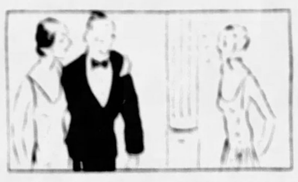
Remember that the parking time is always short in the congested area of a woman-tamer's heart.

* * *

Never follow any man so closely that it will JAR you if he STOPS suddenly.

* * *

When you see a sign: "No Parking Here" on a man's heart, do not despair; there is always some little side entrance or alleyway, like platonic friendship," where you can wedge your way in.



Always carry protective fenders on your heart, so that it may remain intact, despite the jolts, nicks and sideswipes.

* * *

Watch the "other woman" and don't let her "crowd you" out of your place in a man's affections.

* * *

Shut off the motor of your emotions when your husband goes out and says he'll "be back in half an hour." Save your gas until he GETS back.

* * *

Don't get panicky when you see dangerous crossings or a parting of the ways ahead. Just go slow and keep your head until Fate gives you the signal to ACT.

* * *

Look out for the LITTLE cars in Love's path; you can see a big danger and prepare for it, but it's always the unexpected little flivver of a flirtation that upsets you.

Never change your mind after you have signaled for a "turn" in your affections, if you expect a man to take you seriously. Sending him away "forever" tonight and calling him up tomorrow morning is a woman's way of wrecking everything.

* * *

When you feel a sentimental skid threatening, put on your emotional chains—and go slow. And don't allow yourself to be blinded by ANY man's lights; no man is as dazzling as he seems, while he's making love.

* * *

If you see a man is determined to "pass" you up, give him the road and save yourself a lot of painful heart-bruises.

* * *

Blow your own horn occasionally, nobody else is going to do it for you.

* * *

A woman's heart is always either exceeding the speed limit or getting parked in the wrong place, but no matter what happens to your heart, DON'T LOSE YOUR HEAD—and you'll be safe!

Isn't It So?

Even the self-made man asks for favors.

The history of the world is a record of hisses and kisses.

A woman seldom knows just what she wants, but she usually gets it.

Clothes don't make the man. A stiff shirt is often just a front for a stuffed shirt.

When he wants his diamond back that is a sign the engagement is on the rocks.

There are too many people who kick you in the seat of the trousers when you crave a slap on the back.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I have an old Indian meal basket, woven firmly of raffia, with a design of birds upon it, in red and black.

There is a break in that design . . . a little open space where the spreading wings do not quite meet. The squaw who made that basket left that space so "the spirit could go in and out."

She could not have told you what she meant by "the spirit." But she was sure that there was something in a man's life and a man's work beside the man himself.

She looked at the growing corn. There was a Mystery in the growing corn. There was Something that brought the corn out of the hard, dry seed, sent it pushing up through the dark earth, made it break into blade and blossom and fruitful ear.

And there was the same Mystery in a man. Something made a man grow . . . Something filled a man with desire to love and fight and dream and create. Always there was that Mystery, in even the commonest man . . . and in the commonest thing that a man did.

So the squaw left a little break in the design she wove. Not because she thought an actual spirit moved in and out of the basket, but because a Mystery moved in and out of the life of a man.

Always there was that Mystery—

Always man touched it when he made things—

Always there was something wonderful about the work that a man made . . . something that made it more than just a piece of work. That was why good work made a man proud and happy . . . made him honored by the tribe.

You laugh? You say that was "just savage superstition?" I wonder.

Think of the things that other people made by hand—people who were not savages.

Look at old tapestries and carvings . . . hand-made nails, hand-hewn beams—look at the little oak desk your grandfather made on winter evenings and, the bedspread your grandmother wove, working beside him. Queerly, uneven work—not at all like the perfect, machine-made stuff. Yet see how carefully, how lovingly, it was made. They had a feeling about that work that you can never have about machine-made work. Ask old workers and they will tell you that it was GOOD to make things with one's hands—

It did something TO a man . . . it did something FOR a man. Out of that work came something more than a desk or a bedspread.

It gave a man a chance to express himself. To express something that moved mysteriously within himself. There was an Adventure and a Mystery in making a desk by hand, in weaving a bed spread by hand — an Adventure and Mystery you can't find with a machine.

Was that why men and women seemed happier, why life seemed fuller, in those old days even though they had none of our "modern conveniences?"

Was that why they were willing to work longer hours, at smaller wages—why they so often worked for no wage at all, just for the joy of the thing?

(Can you imagine a man running a riveting machine just for the joy of the thing?)

Was there room "for the Spirit to move" when a man made things with his own hands?

And is the Spirit shut out when the work is run through a machine?

THE VERSATILE GENIUS

By Archibald Henderson

One of America's most famous scientists, known the world around, was Marsh, of Yale. No American scientist, it is ventured, has ever made so great a reputation as a discoverer of important fossils on American soil. This great paleontologist discovered in the West the fossilized bones of the ancestors of the horse family. After this discovery, many scientists have concluded that the horse first evolved on the American continent. But the horse seems to have become extinct here many years later, being reintroduced by the Spanish conquerors in the early years of the sixteenth century.

Othniel Charles Marsh was born October 29, 1831, in Lockport, N. Y. He studied at Andover and at Yale; and during his university course he made explorations, as a mineralogist, in Massachusetts, New York and Nova Scotia. Winning the Berkeley Scholarship at Yale, he remained there two years longer, studying mineralogy, geology, and chemistry at the Sheffield Scientific School. Declining the offer of a professorship, he went to Europe and made extension studies, in the museums of England, and at Berlin, Heidelberg and Breslau, where he studied mineralogy, chemistry, paleontology and geology.

With this magnificent training in various branches of science, he returned to the United States in 1866 and became professor of vertebrate paleontology at Yale, a chair created for him. At this time it was generally said by scientists that the United States was a very poor field for paleontological research. Marsh was determined to prove that the contrary was the case. In 1868 he made his first trip to the Rocky Mountains, when he discovered great possibilities for this type of research.

Marsh now proceeded to head several expeditions in search of fossil remains. There were many difficulties to be overcome—poor transportation facilities, hostile Indians, difficulties of securing food and water in desert and uninhabited regions. However, all the difficulties and hardships were overcome, and enormous quantities of fossil remains were discovered. The specimens were counted in tons instead of by numbers. Marsh is said to have expended $1,000,000 in completing his immense paleontological collection.

In 1882 he accepted a position as vertebrate paleontologist on the United States Geological Survey. After this he did not have to pay personally to carry out the expeditions. Various series of fossils, from the Jurassic, Cretaceous and Tertiary periods, were discovered, which proved to be of the greatest scientific value.

Marsh made important contributions in three seperate lines, mammals, birds and reptiles. The remarkable mammals, Brontotheria, and the huge Dinocerata were brought to light by Marsh. He published various books and monographs on his discoveries. Honors were showered upon him during his lifetime. He died in March, 1899.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Fortune Teller

She shuffles the greasy cards and counts
Three equal stacks, while a deep flush mounts
To the cheeks of the girl who sits waiting there
With eager glances and shining hair.
With greasy cards in her dirty hands
The gypsy mumbles of foreign lands.
Of a ship at sea and a gift of gold,
Of new love offered, of love grown cold.
She tells of a friend who is false at heart,
Who plays a cunning and cruel part.
And she warns her hearer: "Beware, beware
Of a woman you know who has golden hair!

The fortune teller wears slattern's rags
And, bending above her, the torn tent sags.
Yet all the day long people come and go
And she doles to the credulous joy and woe.
She is stripped of beauty and bent and old,
But she gives girls fairness and poor men gold;
She is thief and begger and fugitive.
Yet she brings to the weary new will to live.

Text For Today Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.—Galatians, vi:7, 8.

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

A Very Dull Picture

But It Tells a Story.

THE TEMPLE OF ISHTAR, ALL THAT IS LEFT

Men come, build and pass along, lying as dust under the earth that they once "owned" or tilled.

Great kings raised their palaces and monuments, and time washed them away, as waves wash away a child's castle of sand on the edge of the seashore.

You see above a discovery considered by archaeologists to be extremely important. It was unearthed by scientists of the British Museum exploring the site of the ancient City of Nineveh.

There Ashurnasirpal ruled. And on this spot he built to his own honor and glory a temple to Ishtar, goddess of love and of war.

He thought, undoubtedly, that his own grandeur and the power of the great goddess would make the temple last forever to strike awe into the hearts of men.

Nothing is left but some unbaked brick. The British will dig there and perhaps find jewels that belonged to the goddess, although things of that kind usually were stolen from the temples many centuries ago.

This particular foundation of the goddess' temple is about 3,000 years old.

The British have unearthed many interesting things on the ancient site of Nineveh, including the great palace of Sennacherib, the Assyrian who "came down like a wolf on the fold, and his cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold." It was for that proud king that "the angel of death spread his wings on the blast, and breathed in the face of the foe as he passed . . . and the might of the Gentile, unsmote by the sword, hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord."

Old Sennacherib didn't imagine any difficulties of that kind when he was building his great palaces, with court yards that would hold a small city.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Purely a personal piffle: When I see anyone sucking a lemon I pop out in a sweat and I can never remember what Galileo did. I named a beautiful pair of twins Joy and Hope and they never forgave me. When mentally distracted—and who is not?—I pencil mustaches on magazine illustrations.

A hurdy gurdy at twilight gives me the blues. Ted Lewis' battered hat detracts from a smooth act. I once bet on a horse at Latonia that ran the other way and Claude Shafer fell out of the grandstand laughing. My only taste of absinthe was at the Old Absinthe House in New Orleans.

The most uncomfortable night journey was on the famous Blue Train. "Coin" Harvey's son Tom rescued me from drowning as I sank for the third time. My daily cigaret limit is three—one after breakfast, two after dinner. My wife and I slam doors when angry. I'm not afraid of spiders.

I became ill in a restaurant discovering a broken off tooth in a bite of salad and had to leave. On my way home I discovered the tooth was my own. I hate no one but there are some I do not care to know. Every so often I have a craving for pop corn balls and black licorice.

Early fall is my favorite season in New York. I've always wanted to shoot craps with the Marx Brothers. A doorman at the St. Regis calls me "Mr. Frish." I was whiter than a sheet at my wedding. I dislike jewelry, apple strudel, bridge, Shakespearian plays and sitting in any sort of a breeze.

I never sleep a wink the night before an ocean voyage or train trip. And about once every three months I go an entire night without a wink of sleep. The only card game I like is seven up. The biggest fright of my life was when an organist's monkey ran up a spout and jumped into a bedroom window.

My hand writing changes every few years. I enjoy reading small town newspapers, eating in Pullman diners registering at strange hotels, prowling around toy stores and watching audiences arrive at the theater. I turned my head before they sprung the trap at a Kentucky hanging.

The only city that ever looked just as I pictured it is San Diego, Cal. The finest residences for the size of the city are in Kansas City, Mo. No matter how rosy things are I invariably find something to worry about. I carry a 5 and 10 cent store glass ash tray on all travels. My Boston knows when I am depressed and jumps into the side of my chair and lies very still.

* * *

Letters standing out in my memory as splendid symbols of friendship were from Meredith Nicholson, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Ray Long, Roy Howard, Rupert Hughes, Charles G. Norris, Irvin Cobb, Ed. J. Nolan, Minnie C. Vesey and Richmond Temple. All are preserved in a safety deposit box.

* * *

The first time I heard of Royal Gorge I thought they were speaking of a banquet. My boyhood hero was Blondin who walked over Niagara Falls on a rope. I have been sent more than 800 remedies for hiccups and turned them into an article for a magazine. Dr. George Rockwell's new vaudeville act is the most hilarious of the season.

* * *

The most expressive term for getting drunk is "on the loose." The most beautiful word in English is "eloquent" and the ugliest "ornery." John Charles Thomas is the most self effacing professional singer I know. Neither my wife nor I ever spoke harshly to our servants. In California I feel sorry for people in New York and vice versa. The noise of a squeaking hinge makes me shiver and rub my finger across my teeth. On moonlight nights I think of Sumatra although never there.

* * *

My life has been one largely of postponement. I like to drink ice water out of a hand made cup of twirled paper. Of all actresses I remember Julia Arthur most vividly. I have solemnly vowed many times never to wear evening clothes again. Julia Sanderson's fluttery little laugh on the radio amuses me. Straw hats hurt my head. I can never find a blotter when I need one. Lillian Gish once mistook me for a waiter captain. One of my most self effacing friends is a loud mouthed stage comedian. I always stop and listen in on street arguments.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

How do you justify yourself for your cynical attitude?

Do you think that your experience does that?

How do you know but that "experience" is the exception rather than the rule in the matters which have troubled you?

Don't you know that that cynical attitude of yours prevents you from gaining knowledge and pleasure along many lines?

Are you wilfully cutting yourself off from more experience which might teach you a very different lesson?

It is a rule that we get out of things what we put into them.

Half-hearted service, critical high-hatted survey, brings just such shallow returns, as you now rail against.

Were you ever wholly in earnest to do your best?

Did you ever go to the very bottom of anything, with single-minded justice dictating your attitude?

Your attitude is a reflection of your mind.

When you can approach things from the right angle life will explain itself in such a way that you will be certain that there is truth and beauty in the fundamentals of human experience.
